Antiquissimi Sapientes, quos Graeco sermone Philosophos appellamus, si quae naturae vel artis reperissent arcana, ne in pravorum notitiam devenirent, variis modis atque figuris occultabant.

When the wise men of old (whom we call in the Greek tongue 'Philosophers') found any arcana, any hidden things, either of a natural kind, or resulting from the activities of man, they were accustomed to hide these in various ways and with the aid of figures. They did this in order that these might not be understood by the wrong kind of people.

CROLLIUS, De Signaturis, seu vera et viva Anatomia Majoris et Minoris Mundi, 1612.

Introduction

THE TEXT OF THIS DICTIONARY has been designed as a reference, guide and source-book for those involved in general occult studies. Towards this end it presents, under 1,500 headings, the meanings of over 9,000 sigils which appear in European alchemical, astrological, geomantic and related hermetic sources, along with a unique graphic index by means of which the majority of such sigils may be identified.

Before setting out the scope, plan and practical considerations relating to this dictionary, it might be as well for me to explain why I have chosen the relatively rare word sigil to designate the graphic forms dealt with in the text, when the layman might well be tempted to use such words as symbols, signs or even glyphs.

The word symbol is not sufficiently specialised for my purpose, since it carries a literary as well as an iconographic connotation. In a sense, anything may be a symbol of anything else, provided that an analogy is drawn, or some explanation for the symbolising given. Thus, the mediaeval bestiary could take the apparently absurd symbol of the vulture as representative of the Virgin Mary, simply because it was currently believed that a vulture brought forth its young parthenogenetically. Without a literary explanation, tacit or otherwise, alongside such a symbol, then the meaning would be obscure, and in the example given if not heretical, then at least obscene. Only very rarely does a literary explanation stand between the sigils and their 'meanings', and even then only in the various 'graphic systems' (see for example the entry under ORIGIN), for which adequate bibliographic reference is given.

within the entry. For example, the curious sigil  is one of the forms for VIRGO, and has been accorded a certain literary tradition which links it with the Virgin Mary: in the entry I have made reference to this possible graphic etymology, from the initials MV (Maria Virgo), even though in my opinion this etymology is entirely fanciful. The point here is that the 'vulture' symbol requires literary explanation, the sigil for Virgo does not, though such an explanation may throw light on its origin or purpose as a sigil.

The word sign has a very wide application, ranging from gestures and tokens made by the body, to a whole battery of devices designed for the purpose of communication. As a word, therefore, it has connotation far beyond the special sense of 'occult' or 'graphic' which I certainly wish to imply within this dictionary. Additionally, the word sign in this general sense may be easily confused with the word in its special astrological application: the sign of the zodiac is one of the twelve divisions of the ecliptic band, and not, as is sometimes erroneously supposed, the 'graphic symbol' used to denote one of these zodiacal divisions. Thus, the arc of thirty degrees (tropical) between Cancer and Virgo is the sign of the zodiac LEO: a picture of a lion may well be intended to be a symbol of this zodiacal Leo, but the graphic form  is actually the sigil for Leo.

The word glyph is sometimes used in occult contexts, but in its proper application it should be restricted to sculpture and architecture, for it is supposed to refer to symbols appearing in relief work. In the nineteenth century a number of words were derived from 'glyph' relating to the relief processes in the printing industry; perhaps this alone should provide grounds for rejecting the word from the present context. There is no doubt that certain glyphs have become sigils - this is true of many occult sigils derived from the Egyptian hieroglyphics. For example, the hieroglyph ANKH and its component RU, undoubtedly both glyphic in origin, are now frequently used as sigils in their common forms  and .

These general observations may indicate why I have felt compelled to adopt the word sigil in the face of apparent competition from other words.

In fact, its very derivation, from the late Latin sigillum, encourages its use within an occult context, for this word appears frequently in mediaeval magical contexts, and has even been used specifically for certain astrological symbols and devices which were supposed to be amuletic in power. Further, the word in the eighteenth century did carry the specialised meaning of 'a small image'. Since most of the graphic forms in this dictionary are to some extent amuletic - that is, charged with power - and many are 'small images' of cosmic processes, and in almost every case linked with the occult, then the word sigil connotes very well the field to which I have restricted myself here.

Having explained the key word of the title for this dictionary, I must now deal with its intended readership. I have designed the text in such a way that it will be valuable to both specialists and general workers in fields directly or peripherally related to occultism. In particular, it is intended for those whose research brings them into contact with occult or hermetic texts, ancient or modern - for historians of the occult, for astrologers, for those interested in the 'history of ideas', for art students and art historians.

The book needs no justification so far as historians of the occult are concerned: without doubt there is a great need for such a work as this. I cannot pretend that the specialist will meet with many sigils from his own field with which he is not already familiar, but one may be certain that he will find in the dictionary some indication of how the sigils familiar to him were seen and interpreted in related fields outside his own specialisation. This much is guaranteed simply because I have endeavoured to use the sigils recorded by specialists in a wide range of occult and hermetic areas. A specialist in alchemical fields cannot avoid having some passing acquaintance with astrological sigils, for example, but it is unlikely that the full wealth of astrological sigils will have been appreciated by such a specialist. Again, a specialist in astrology, or the history of astrology, may well be surprised to discover the extent to which the development of astrological sigils has been bound up with the prevailing religious and occult notions concerning the nature of symbolism. Such ideas as these are intimated in the bibliographic sources given alongside the presentation of the sigils.

Practical astrologers are, by the very nature of their subject, required to have some knowledge of the history of their art, and to be aware of something of the 'graphic theory' underlying the sigils they use. This dictionary will be of great value to such individuals, for it will reveal something of the variety and wealth of astrological sigils and of related graphic theories of symbolism. At the same time, this text may offer a serious challenge to the superficial 'histories of astrology' and 'histories of the occult' which, under different authorship and title, but with much the same moribund content, appear each year with depressing regularity. These sigils, and the sources from which they are abstracted, indicate that the history of astrology and the occult is not at all what the superficial historians suppose. Those who would wish to combat this nonsense could do no better than commence with a study of certain of the source-book material given in support of the sigil forms presented here. I know from experience that it is difficult to be a practical astrologer, or interested in the history of the subject, without becoming fascinated by the inner meanings of the sigils, which speak a language at once arcane and cosmic, reminding one of the definition of a symbol given by HAASE 1975 as 'essentially purposive... it points to some Higher Order for whose characteristics it is a kind of abbreviation'. The bibliographic sources give more often than not hints and guesses at the 'Higher Order', at the inner meaning, though in this field, perhaps more than any other, one must have the eyes to see, and the mind to understand.

Those individuals who find themselves interested in what is nowadays called 'the history of ideas', but which in earlier days was called merely 'history' (on the fair assumption that men were motivated precisely by ideas, and not merely by 'social' or 'economic' pressures), cannot fail to find this dictionary useful, for underlying many of the sigils one finds traces of an ancient wisdom, expressed in a graphic precision which is surprising. Additionally, the lines of thought expressed in the combinations of sigils and bibliographic reference will provide a fertile ground for further research into the history of ideas, albeit ideas in graphic forms. A useful history of the influence of graphic expression has still to be written, and it would be encouraging to think that the indications set out in this dictionary might contribute to such a work. The study of occult sigils often has the effect of pulling together certain literary themes with the artistic expression associated with them. For example, the influence of John Dee's curious MONAD  on subsequent graphic theory is considerable, and a grasp of the Englishman's influence on Boehme's use of sigils, so ably studied by FREHER 1717, and introduced to modern scholarship by MUSES 1951, might indicate to the historian lines of thought by which the ideas and painterly expression of William Blake might be approached in a new and valid way. Several of the ideas relating to secret and heretical influences in the history of art set out in GETTINGS 1978 took their origin from a study of sigils - notably the discoveries relating to the Taurean-Piscean symbolism in that remarkable basilican church of San Miniato al Monte, in Florence, and the curious use of the dual sigils  and  in the Rosicrucian symbolism of St. Pierre, in Geneva. Such examples could easily be multiplied - especially in regard to mediaeval and Renaissance works of art.

Such an observation reminds us that art students, and especially those fine art students who find themselves interested in arcane matters - a most common thing in the modern climate - will find this collection of sigils a stimulating source for research and experiment. I need hardly say that students of graphics have for a long time been in need of such a book in order that they might grasp something of the rich graphic tradition which underlies the history of their subject, and even modern symbolism. Not only the sigils themselves, but also the supporting bibliography - especially those titles which deal with graphic theories - will provide stimulus for further research, and perhaps contribute further to the development of a graphic theory of forms.

The general historian requires a dictionary such as this for reasons which scarcely require discussion - the book is designed precisely to aid in the deciphering and amplification of obscure historical documents. The art historian is, perhaps unwittingly, desperately in need of a book of this nature, for many of the apparently meaningless scrawls, symbols and decorative motives in mediaeval works of art, costume decorations and so on are in fact occult sigils, intended to encapsulate meaning, and now require precise identification. The structure of this dictionary provides at least a preliminary statement of the kind of systematic work which may be done in this and related fields. It is becoming increasingly obvious to some historians that the development of art is itself the history of the injection of powerful ideas from hidden and sometimes unidentifiable sources at important moments in history. For example, at the one extreme of our European culture, we see the dependence of art not only on the banking systems developed by the Medici, but also on the occult ideas which this family encouraged in secret, and which fed the development of Renaissance art to a freedom of human expression rooted in an occultism which only the Council of Trent was able to deflect. PANOFSKY 1967 has hinted at such roots of occultism in our culture, in much the same vein as WIND 1958; in a more occult setting, COLLIN 1954 has touched upon the similar occult influences in other contexts. At the other extreme, in modern times we find RINGBOM 1970 indicating the dependence of modern art on the works of such esoteric and occult lines of thought as Theosophy and Anthroposophy. My own study of related themes, in GETTINGS 1978, presents a bird's eye view of this relationship between certain occult themes and heretical praxes and the history of art. With such a historical situation revealing itself, we need no justification for attempting a preliminary survey of the occult sigils used by secret schools and individual occultists.

So far as I am aware, this is the first attempt to collect together under one heading, and with an index guide, so large a number of occult sigils. The two books which have to some extent served a similar function as the present one are altogether limited in scope, and do not even pretend to the advantages of this dictionary. The work of SOMMERHOFF 1701, which so obviously influenced profoundly the more easily available GESSMANN 1906, is restricted to alchemical sigils, and in this realm is indispensable, not merely in the very number of sigils which are presented, but also in the breadth of definition offered.

Excellent as it is, the book is largely unavailable, and is in any case intended for specialist alchemists and for a medical profession which is defunct. The work of SHEPHERD 1971 touches upon the occult field only in the most perfunctory manner, the intention being to provide a worthwhile reference within a modern context of signs and symbols; the occulta which he does record from cabbalistic and hermetic sources are sparse, and give no useful source. For example, SHEPHERD 1971 gives the sigil  for the zodiacal sign Capricorn, which is all well and good so far as it goes: my own entry under CAPRICORN lists no fewer than eighty different sigils, alongside bibliographic sources.

Perhaps it would be appropriate to give some indication of how this dictionary was compiled, and an idea of its underlying structure. The work was constructed by the relatively simple, if somewhat tedious and laborious, process of examining and collating a large number of previous compilations which relate occult sigils to particular meanings. The work was rounded off by a thorough survey of the most important texts in which occult theories of symbolism and graphic forms were discussed. The resultant collection of sigils, and their simplified meanings, were then collated, assorted, creamed for utility, and then arranged in alphabetical order, according to meaning, and set out in the form presented in this dictionary. With a vast consumption of index cards, a special graphic index was evolved to facilitate the identification of individual sigils. This important contribution to the dictionary is explained on page 323,

The structure of the main body of the dictionary is that of an alphabetical listing, in which the greater number of some 9,000 sigils have been classified under about 1,500 headings. Each entry is accorded a heading, a hanging indent in capitals, followed by an abbreviated class list, and a reference which contains at least one bibliographic source from just over 300 titles, indicating the provenance of the sigil recorded in the entry. In many cases, the entry includes also a brief note intended as a guide towards a deeper insight into the meaning of the sigil.

Within the dictionary I have included a selection of the more important secret alphabets. All of these are probably too well known to any longer merit the title 'secret', yet their presence in all standard occult works, and their virtually unrecognized survival in certain paintings of an esoteric intent, requires that they at least be touched upon as pertinent to the theme. My aim has been to record the best known of the scripts, and, by virtue of the explicit bibliography of sources, to point the reader to other alphabets, should his interest lead him on to further study. Although I include only about 50 actual alphabets within the body of this work, I accumulated in my researches over 300 which I originally considered worthy of inclusion, and yet, when it came to the business of setting these down, it seemed merely an offence to the patience of the reader, and carried too far into a relatively obscure specialisation. The short account of the two basic classes of European scripts - the HEBRAIC SCRIPT and SECRET SCRIPTS - will at least serve as a sort of introduction to this fascinating field, and obviates any elaboration here.

Not only was it not advisable for me to deal with all known secret alphabets, but also it proved impossible to deal thoroughly with each individual script. Generally I have chosen one sample alphabet, even though in almost every case several variants are known to exist. For example, the entry on RUNES is as long and thorough as space permits, yet I did not even touch upon the derivative secret scripts, or the cryptographic use of runes - hence, I make no mention of the tent runes or the branch runes, which a thorough treatment would have to include. Equally, I have not included the numerous 'code' or Tamaric alphabets, such as the atbash, in which the first letter of the alphabet is substituted for the last letter, the second for the penultimate, and so on, or the common Albam or Avgad, based on letter substitutions. Such systems, whilst quite certainly used in secret writings, and on magical amulets, are only distantly related to occult symbolism. On similar grounds I have not included any of the cryptic writings connected with Gematria, a system of word exchange based on numerical values, nor the traditional Notarikon, based on the abbreviation of words to the initials of those words (and sometimes to the final letters of those words) giving rise to puzzling secret scripts.

The main body of this dictionary, comprising the alphabetical entries, is designed to compress a large amount of useful information into a small space, and towards this end each entry follows a schema designed to classify and explain the individual sigils.

The hanging catchword in capitals is a heading, which generally indicates the object symbolised by the sigil, rather than the name of the sigil itself. Wherever possible this heading is the traditional name attached to the object symbolised within the hermetic source from which it was derived. In some cases, however, it has obviously been necessary for me to select or invent a name for identification, even though no indication of the precise name appeared in the source. In such cases I have simply used my own discretion. For example, the choice of the word WRATH for the sigil given by Boehme  might be reasonably questioned by those unfamiliar with Boehme's cosmology, yet this word catches more precisely the theosophist's high anthropomorphic vision, than would a word such as DARK or NEGATIVE, which might well be used to contrast with his sigil for that Outpouring which he calls LIGHT, and to which he gives the mirror-image sigil . I have wherever possible used one word for the heading, but this should not blind one to the fact that all occult sigils are multilayer in meaning: for once BLAVATSKY 1877 was not being obscure when she claimed that many occult sigils are intended to be read on seven levels! It is probably this undoubted septenary nature of sigillic meaning which to some extent explains why I feel somewhat frustrated in the definitions I have given many of these sigils, for virtually every sigil could be the subject of at least a paragraph of explanation, and in some cases, indeed, as with such sigils as the ankh  the sphragis  or the monad  a whole book might well be usefully written. The format of the book has determined that the meaning of each sigil be dealt with mainly by providing a reference - by setting the sigil in an available context - with the result that many of the multilayer connotations and dynamic speculations implicit within the sigillic form have been ignored. In some cases I have even had to ignore some of the more important bibliographic sources for such ideas, in order to avoid perplexing the reader with too much complexity of supportive explanation. For example, it would have been possible to present a deeply esoteric explanation for the analysis in STEINER 1906 for the sigil for CANCER  relating it to the activity of the soul, and revealing the duality of the sigil as expressive of a corresponding duality within the soul, involved with the power of the soul to construct the physical body. No justice may be done in brief to STEINER 1906, and indeed a thorough treatment of the idea behind his explanation would take us into a literature as ancient as Porphyry, as modern as Goethe. In such cases I have restrained myself, and have substituted in the place of prolix explanation and bibliographic reference a set of more 'accessible' explanations, in the hope that the mere bibliographic reference will induce the reader to further research. This does not mean, of course, that the deeply esoteric has been entirely expunged but it does mean that the esoteric is merely hinted at, in order to avoid obfuscation. The attendant limitations of explanation are to be experienced especially in connexion with the sigils from the hermetic Rosicrucian stream, and in the explanation of sigils derived from such authors as Boehme and Blavatsky, in which cases my entries are in almost every case virtually apologetic thumb-nail sketches of profoundly significant occult vision.

Arising from this endemic complexity of the occult tradition has been my doubt, in some cases, as to how the sigils should be named. This is a problem which is especially prevalent in the alchemical sections, for it is in this field that the nomenclature is especially rich. For example, the encyclopaedic work of SOMMERHOFF 1701 lists no fewer than 40 different names for SAL AMMONIAC, and even more for SULPHUR, and yet I was reduced to presenting such material under one heading. The impossibility of doing this sensibly in every case has resulted in a degree of duplication of sigils, and the provision of entries which might be taken - by those involved in exoteric studies, at least - as the same substance or conception. Needless to say, I have attempted to avoid the complex cross-referencing to which this 'endemic complexity' leads, and wherever possible I have used the most well-known traditional name.

Immediately after each heading, the entry is prefaced by an abbreviation for the class list, the group of hermetic studies in which the sigil is most commonly found. These abbreviations are:

Alc.	Alchemical
Ast.	Astrological
Geo.	Geomantic
Mag.	Magical
Occ.	Occult
Pal.	Palmistic
Rel.	Religious

Naturally, it will be found that there is considerable overlapping of boundaries, especially among the sigils used in the astrological and alchemical contexts. I have tried to avoid confusion, and yet have attempted at the same time to be fairly comprehensive, by using a system of cross-reference. For example, the astrological JUPITER is referred to the alchemical TIN, and the two entries constructed separately, even though it is understood that the two groups of sigils are frequently interchangeable.

The Alchemical group includes by far the greatest number of sigils, mainly because for almost two thousand years there has been a tradition of listing sigils and their names, and many such lists have survived. In order to avoid prolixity, and the mere recording of sigils for the sake of recording, I have restricted myself largely to compiling these entries from some twenty or so books and manuscripts which I myself regard as the best keys to the sigils. Additionally, I have exercised my own discretion as to which sigils to include, rejecting all the dubious ones, and those without clear or agreed meanings. This explains why I have in some cases suppressed certain of the meanings from the sigils given in such sources as THESAURUS 14C, for example, since a few of these are illegible or dubious as copies; it explains also why I have not recorded some of the sigils in the invaluable GESSMANN 1906, since certain of the meanings recorded - and indeed, certain of the sigils - are questionable. I have in almost every case restricted myself to reproducing the sigils which have entered in the Western tradition, which has of course meant that many useful lists have been rejected. This explains why the lists of Greek sigils preserved so thoroughly by ZURETTI 1932 have not been incorporated to any extent into my text, whilst the other, less generous lists, from such sources as BERTHELOT 1985 have been included. Equally, the vast numbers of Arabic, Egyptian and Syrian sigils which may be found in manuscripts and in specialist articles, have not been included, save those which are (perhaps) interesting from the point of view of graphic etymology, and the forms relating to astrology, given by such authors as LUEDY 1928, within a larger study of symbolism. In view of this it might surprise the reader to find so many sigils which have been preserved from the Hebraic tradition, yet here I would argue that many of these sigillic forms have found their way - albeit unrecognized - into the mainstream symbolism of mediaeval and Renaissance art. Many of the 'decorations' and apparently meaningless 'doodles' on the hems of the Saints' clothing in such works of art are in fact derived from the orient and from the Hebraic, in an 'arabism' which would have shocked many mediaeval artists, had they recognised their sources! Many of these sigils are obviously derived from secret alphabets (which is one reason why I have included such textual scripts within the present work), other are more perplexing, being both difficult to track down and interpret, even when found alongside forms more easily identifiable - as for example along the Madonna's hem in Raphael's Ansidesi Madonna in the National Gallery, London, only one of which is immediately recognisable as being from the astrological or alchemical tradition:     the standard sigil for PISCES  which is of course extremely significant within the context of the secret structure and symbolism of this painting. On the other hand, fascinating sigils for which I was able to determine a meaning from a separate text which was not itself a Western form, led to difficulties.

The Astrological entries have received a more thorough 'graphic etymological' treatment than the others. This has been possible simply because extant documentation permits a clearer picture of the development of these sigils to be constructed. Surprisingly, these astrological sigils reveal graphic etymologies which confound the more popular theories concerning their forms. I have avoided recording the more irresponsible and imaginative 'graphic etymologies' which have been accorded many of the astrological sigils, yet at the same time I have attempted to give some indication of the common idea underlying a particular form by recording the popular etymology, even in those cases where I know this not to be accurate. Thus, I have avoided mentioning the imaginative interpretations of SUCHER 1971, and yet have recorded the antiquated suggestions of AGRIPPA 1510, and even the modern 'rationales' by such astrologers as HONE 1951. Inevitably, in view of the close tie which used to exist between astrology and astronomy, one or two of the sigils recorded for astrology are still in use in astronomical circles. I have tried, however, to avoid recording the large number of abbreviations, symbols and short-forms which are used in modern astronomy, except of course when these are found also in hermetic sources. Needless to say, I have refrained from including the astrological sigils accorded highly specialist meanings in the various sequences of the secret alphabets which include astrological forms; even so, in one or two cases I have found it necessary to refer to certain of these, for the sake of clarity, as for example in the entry for ASCENDANT. In a few cases, especially where the astrological bordered on the purely occult areas, a number of sigils are known to me which I have not been able to include in the present work simply because they are not drawn or reproduced alongside literary explanations. One of the most interesting of such sigils is that found on the sword blade in the hand of Michael in Piero della Francesca's famous painting in the National Gallery, London:  So far as I know, this sigil has no attestation, yet it is extremely important as a symbol in that it is found frequently in Michaelic imagery. Now, whilst this sigil is not (so far as I am aware) discussed in any of the books on symbolism, it is quite clearly linked with the concept of Michael as the leader of the seven so-called Archangels (in fact, in Trithemian lore, the Secundadeis) which came into Western occultism from the Arabs, by way of Peter of Abano. It is, furthermore, a sigil actually described in extant literature, for the SOHAR SHEMOTH refers to 'Six luminosities (which) form a circle, surrounding a seventh Luminosity in the centre', a description which is precisely reflected in the Michaelic sigil. This sigil is linked with many occult ideas - with the concept of the QUINTESSENCE (in that the outer circle is the basis for the hexagrammic sigil of the ELEMENTS: ) and it would be no difficult matter to link the sigil, via TRITHEMIUS 1522, with the 'Seven Ages' or periodicities, and indeed with many other septenaries. Such sigils I could not properly include within this Dictionary, in spite of their intrinsic interest to me, and their undoubted importance within the esoteric tradition.

The Geomantic section refers exclusively to the correct use of the word, and not to anything suggested by the modern popular misuse. Geomancy properly relates to the art of contacting spirits by means of earths, stones and minerals, usually in order to predict the future. The so-called 'geomancy' associated with ley-line studies, which are so popular, and so misunderstood, today, is merely an example of the wrongful annexing of an ancient word which had already a specific connotation and denotation. The misuse, which is daily on the increase, very probably arose because those who developed the various ley-line theories were unfamiliar with the deeper occult tradition, and certainly unfamiliar with spiritoid prediction. The misuse was thoroughly compounded by a common failing among nineteenth-century sinologists in translating the Chinese term feng shui, a system distantly related to the modern telluric studies of ley-lines, quite wrongly as 'geomancy'. The traditional geomancy of Western occultism is a predictive art, involved with contacting spirit agencies, and it is in this sense that the entries are included in this text.

The Magical entries are limited almost exclusively to the more common of the numerous sigils apportioned to the vast hordes of demons. This list is short within the present text because I have felt it necessary to limit demonic activity, for fear it would possess entirely the book. My aim has been to record only the most interesting sigils, and then only those for the more infamous demons. I have limited the choice strictly to those which are simple in form. A glance through the hundreds of demon sigils in any common grimoire or specialist text - for example, SCHEIBLE 1848 - will indicate something of the temptations of complexity and ineptitude which I have managed to resist:

are two examples of sigils for MEPHISTOPHIEL which I did not record from the many supplied by SCHEIBLE 1848. Within this magical section I have avoided also recording protective sigils, such as talismans used to ward off the evil eye, and those designed to attract beneficent forces or spirits. The majority of these sigils are the equivalent of emotional doodles, with none of the cosmic significance of true occult sigils. They are best left in oblivion, and in any case usually legitimately exclude themselves from the present context simply because they do not express a clear meaning. An exception to this veto is the inclusion of many early Christian sigils (especially those presented so ably by TESTA 1962) which were originally either occult or esoteric, and were later quietly appropriated for magical and talismanic use.

The Occult entries include those sigils which do not fall easily into any of the other categories, and which still express occult ideas, if only by virtue of being involved with a graphic system of occult thought or symbolism. Such consideration underlies the reason why the entry under CROSS is marked Occ. rather than Rel., for it is precisely the occult context which is of interest to us, rather than the traditional religious view. It may be found that within this general Occult series I have had to exercise more fully than in other sections my prerogative to provide verbal equivalents for sigils which were not given names by their originators or recorders. I have tried to mitigate the effects of this by providing useful cross-reference.

The Palmistry section is admittedly the shortest, and the sigils within it might well have been swallowed up by the Occult heading, save for the fact that Palmistry is not strictly speaking an occult study, even though the symbols and sigils used in the chiromnical and chiromantic traditions are derived from occult sources.

The Religious entries are restricted exclusively to those sigils which are linked with the occult stream in general, or with the hermetic stream of esoteric Christianity in particular. In making choice of sigils from the vast number available, I have had to exercise my own judgement, without giving specific reasons for particular inclusions. For example, when I record the ancient sigil given by BOCK 1931 as symbolic of CHRIST, from a glyph recorded in the tomb of Domitilla , I chose the sigil because of its connexion with the Piscean imagery attached to Christ (see GETTINGS 1978), and because it combines solar imagery, as well as the cross, integrated within the more obvious image of an anchor. The neighbouring glyphs in this same source   could hardly be taken as symbolic of Christ in that there is no supporting evidence - they are no doubt esoteric glyphs, and whilst one may make an informed guess at their meaning, one does not actually know what they mean. It would not have been possible to discuss in detail all such choices and rejections in the construction of this book. One may take it that if a common symbol which has found its way into a sigil form is not included in the text, then there may be serious doubts as to the meaning ascribed to it. This certainly explains why I have rejected so many of the sigils in such a work as VERARDI 1972, for many of these, in spite of being accorded an esoteric meaning in connexion with the frulli art of Alberobello, really belong to the exoteric tradition, and in most cases permit quite other interpretations to those given by VERARDI 1972.

Following the class abbreviation is the actual entry which, without exception, gives a bibliographic reference to the list of literary sources set out on page 293ff. This reference consists of a word and date. The word is either the name of the author or a keyword taken from the title of the work, chosen in order to provide a distinctive reference; the date is the date of publication (not always the first edition), or the century of compilation. This date is not in itself intended to indicate the antiquity of the sigil given in the reference, but merely designates an accessible source as a starting point for further research. This explains why certain of the astrological forms, though Graeco-Byzantine, are recorded by the modern references such as BERTHELOT 1885 or NEUGEBAUER 1959.

This bibliographic reference is provided also as a source-list for those who wish to pursue more deeply the levels of meaning ascribed to particular sigils, or revealed in various graphic etymologies. This of course means that the bibliography has been limited to those texts which record specifically the sigils, as well as give an explanation or account of their denotation or meaning. This explains why, for example, I have chosen to quote BLAVATSKY 1888 in connexion with the CROSS symbolism without mention of the important RAGON 1853 (the source upon which BLAVATSKY 1888 leaned), simply because no sigils are given by RAGON 1853. For similar reasons neither BURCKHARDT 1958 nor GUENON 1975, both of whom deal excellently with the symbolism of the cross, are mentioned in the entry.

Since I have determined to include material from texts which give both a sigil and an explanation for the sigil, I have in some cases omitted some sigils simply because no graphic form was recorded in the sources where the sigils themselves were described, and their meanings given. For example, if merely the literary traditions had been my concern, then it would have been possible to give the sigil  under the entry for ETHERIC, for there exist descriptions of such a sigil (as a 'five-pointed star') in, for example, BLAVATSKY 1888, associated with the glyph which I have seen many times on ancient remains in Egypt. In its glyph form the sigil is sometimes shown with the sigil for the Sun  and it would of course have been useful to record this solar-centred figure, for within the traditional occult cosmogenesis the etheric forces are linked directly with the sun itself (see for example WACHSMUTH 1923). Occultists are aware that this sigil symbolises the etheric body - is indeed a vestigial drawing of the human etheric body itself - and in this connexion had a profound influence on early Christian art. For example, the so-called orantes in catacomb paintings are not in fact intended to show figures in prayer, as most art historians assume, but as BOCK 1931 says, are 'representatives of the departed', being schematic drawings of the liberated etheric body. However, whilst several good occult sources do give descriptions (and indeed diagrams) of this symbolic form, I have not been able to find a graphic representation alongside a name or a meaning. For this reason I have had to omit the sigil from the text.

With all these bibliographic references there is the danger that in simply abstracting a sigil from its context much of the complexity, and certainly its multi-layer structure, will be lost. An example of this may be found in the simple entry under SWASTIKA, the sigil said to be the oldest of all graphic symbols. The entry deals only briefly with the meaning of the sigil, yet as BLAVATSKY 1877 says, 'It is not too much to say that the compound symbolism of this universal and most suggestive of signs contains the key to the seven great mysteries of the Kosmos' - a daunting enough thought for any compiler of sigils. Thus, my bibliographic reference after SWASTIKA is intended to point to some of the occult depth within BLAVATSKY 1877, and in turn to the various bibliographic references which this author herself adduces.

The inclusion of references under the conditions set out above has of course led to the use of certain titles which might - and with good reason - be sneered at by the academic purist. For example, the highly personalised symbolism of KOCH 1930, who in fact reveals little knowledge of occult symbolism, has been included because his sigils and meanings, whatever their merit, have already entered into the bloodstream of occult symbolism. The same might be said concerning the work of CIRLOT 1962, who demonstrates little real familiarity with graphic symbolism, yet through his writings has influenced a whole generation towards a particular method of interpretation. Naturally, such imaginative constructions, whatever their intrinsic value, must be recorded in such a work as this: no good lexicographer could afford to reject a word from his dictionary simply because it is sometimes spelled wrongly, or given a silly definition! It follows from this procedure that the scholarship underlying my own researches has had to encompass all levels of academicism, ranging from the brilliance of NEUGEBAUER 1943, who has put the study of the ancient sigils on an entirely new footing, to the embarrassment of ALBERTUS 1974, who cannot spell even the English names attached to the sigils he lists, let alone the Latin.

The sigils themselves are listed chronologically by date of bibliographic reference, and then alphabetically within the same chronological period. In a few cases, as for example in the entry PLANETARY SYMBOLS, I have treated the entry alphabetically throughout, in order to avoid confusion. It is evident that the date attached to the reference does not always indicate the earliest known use of a particular sigil, even though in many cases it does give some indication of the period during which the sigil was being used with a particular meaning. It is worth pointing out here that the dating of sigils - particularly occult sigils - is generally a most difficult exercise. Even in those cases where it is possible to track down the provenance in a general way, a precise date is generally elusive. For example, it is possible to indicate the provenance of the modern sigil for the Sun ☉ as being Italy (perhaps Florence) round about 1480; yet one cannot determine from available sources whence this sigil was derived for occult use. My article under SOLAR 1978 sets out some of the problems regarding this particular sigil, and this may be taken as representative of the general problem of dating sigils. The problems which arise in regard to the dating of alchemical sigils is even more pronounced than with the astrological ones, for these have been copied and re-copied with more or less care from late mediaeval sources, many of which are now lost. Generally I have followed in the footsteps of GESSMANN 1906, and have merely indicated that they are 'mediaeval', even when informed guesswork would suggest that they are much older.

It may surprise the layman that even the relatively modern sigils for the signs of the zodiac and the planets are difficult to date. Whilst one may survey the development of their forms from Graeco-Byzantine sources, in most cases the modern forms did not appear until relatively late. My own view is that they were promulgated by esoteric schools - perhaps indeed by the School of Chartres and its subsidiaries - but there is, so far as I know, no certain historical records which show by whom or when such work was done. Certainly, the introduction of printing to the West had a profoundly settling effect on the forms of the sigils, if only by virtue of the fact that typefaces generally included the range of specially cut founts of astrological sigils.

This might have been a convenient point to present a commentary on the history of the theory underlying occult symbolism, which has a considerable bearing on the development of the sigils: however, the sigils themselves have left little space here for such a study, and

I must content myself with augmenting the bibliography with certain relevant works which themselves deal with the history, even though within specific and somewhat specialised scholastic areas. The development of alchemical sigillic forms has been treated with reasonable thoroughness - for example in the excellent works of CROSLAND 1962, CARBONELLI 1925 and ZURETTI 1932. On the other hand, virtually everything written around the theory of astrological symbolism does not stand the test of even the most elementary scholastic investigation - though such authors as Brouault 1664, Kriegsmann 1665, HUET 1679 (whose ideas appear to have influenced most modern writers on the subject) are worth study. The theory of occultist symbolism fares only a little better, simply because those who did know (as opposed to those who pretended to know) wrote little, and usually about only a few of the sigils. Thus, the excellent work of BLAVATSKY 1888, whilst worth close study, yields few sigils, yet the relatively imaginative work of WIRTH 1927, in which he attempts to reconcile the tradition of the Hebraic and neo-Platonic Cabbalistic tradition with the alchemical tradition, with a view to throwing light on the 22 major arcana of the Tarot pack, produces many sigils, most of which are of little real value within the esoteric setting of the sigillic tradition. In the comparison evinced here, the numerates are perhaps less important than the qualities of the work involved: BLAVATSKY 1888 did know what she was writing about, whereas WIRTH 1927 did not, yet (such is the development of such things in popular occultism) it is the sigillic forms of Wirth which are now more widely spread in our culture, and even used by those who should know better.

An entry which gives more information than a mere bibliographic reference is generally intended either to throw more light on a particular sigil, or to suggest ideas for further research: in no way is such an entry designed to give a full account of the derivation or meaning of a sigil. One of the main problems in the approach to occult sigils is that the majority of them mean very many things, and in some cases the precise meaning may be gathered only from a given context. For example, in the single manuscript I list as ALCHEMY 1650, the sigil  is accorded three different meanings - REVERBERATIO, EARTH and SALT - and it is only from a particular context that one may decide which of these three meanings is intended by the sigil.

This problem is further complicated by the undisguised intention of many alchemical texts to speak in riddles, presumably to the initiated few. A good example may be found in the alchemical term AIR, for which the most common sigil is a variant on . The uninitiated might quite reasonably assume that the name and the sigil refer to the mixture of gases in which we are immersed, but a survey of the SHORT LEXICON of WAITE 1894 will rapidly disenchant him, for this records that 'Eugenius Philalethes says that the air is not an element, but a certain miraculous hermaphrodite, the cement of two worlds, and a medley of extremes. It is the sea of things invisible, and retains the species of all things whatsoever. It is also the envelope of the life of our sensitive spirit. The First Matter of the philosophers is compared to air because of its restlessness.'

Such considerations should rightly lead those interested in matters of scholarship to exercise caution when consulting this Dictionary, for there may be no doubt whatsoever that the terms used by the early occultists do not always correspond to the meanings we take for granted in our modern usage. A perusal of the encyclopaedic SOMMERHOFF 1701 will quickly demonstrate the absurdity of assuming that the meanings are even remotely the same - indeed, a glance at the notes on Venus microcosmi in the entry under VENUS should indicate some of the difficulties here. Again, a reading of the entry under PHLEGMA in the text is also relevant, for it might be reasonable to assume that the phlegma of the alchemists was that sputum to which we refer when we use the derivative term, or perhaps linked with the theory of the humours, and hence tied up with the rich theories of the TEMPERAMENTS - however, as SOMMERHOFF 1701 reveals, this phlegma is an especially important distilled liquid used in the alchemical search for the Philosopher's Stone, and presumably the sigils given alongside the name would refer to the alchemical meaning, rather than to anything merely modern. Thus, in specialist work, where a precision of meaning is required, it would be as well to consult such a specialist as SOMMERHOFF 1701, or a similar reliable Lexicon, in order to ascertain the real meaning contained within the sigil, as intended by those who used the sigil. Specialist requirements apart, however, the present Dictionary has been designed so that it corresponds to modern denotations and connotations (the frequent use of the Latin names is intended as a mute reminder that a strict translation does not always carry one to the sense intended in a modern usage), though naturally within a field where it is taken for granted that things are rarely what they seem to be. It is probably because so many of the ancient sigils were intended for levels of understanding which are no longer generally accessible that the complicated diagrams and co-ordinations of sigils in such a text as GEHEIME 1788 are, for all their apparent aim of setting out Rosicrucian lore, largely incomprehensible save to a few specialists. No dictionary may take into account such refinements and complications, and the result is that certain of the explanations of the sigils are on a level somewhat removed from the levels intended by the early occultists. A fine example of this loss of meaning may be seen in the sigil for SULPHUR  which may in one context refer precisely to the element, in another to the fixed principle underlying natural phenomena, in another to the alchemical union of Earth and Fire, and on another level simply to 'Spirit'. On each of these different levels, the materiality of sulphur itself (and consequently its sigil) may be related to one of the Three Principles, the sigils for which are  the potentialities emanating from the Chaos of Materia Prima. Such considerations as these indicate how, in the field of hermetic symbolism at least, a linear thinking is almost a hindrance to right understanding; yet the fact is that all classification systems - especially those of a dictionary - are in themselves linear in form and intention.

It is clear therefore that, the nature of hermetic symbolism being what it is, the need to be usefully simple has led to the sacrifice of a certain quality of 'inner' meaning. For example, in the alchemical text GABELLA 1615, which is in some respects a model of occult graphic symbolising, it is difficult to root out the many subtle explanations of the sigil  which is termed Nuntius, and which I have listed quite simply as MERCURY, in a wild injustice to both Mercury and GABELLA 1615.

In this seventeenth-century text the sigil is treated in the manner of the best alchemical texts, which is to say with apparent confusion. The author's hints and guesses are obviously designed to discourage linear thinking, and if followed expertly do indeed lead to a series of multi-dimensional meanings which are very impressive in themselves, though hard to resolve into a few explanatory words such as would be required of a dictionary of this kind. The meaning is indeed to be eased out of this hermetic text, in the process beloved by the tortuous, highly spiritual, sentient-thinking of the late-mediaeval alchemists. In regard to his sigil Nuntius GABELLA 1615 points out that this is the Mercurial Nuncio, suggesting that it is both a mediator between the solar and lunar forces, as well as between the solar and the elemental. By subtle choice of words he indicates that Mercury must contain a dangerous element itself, in that it mediates between the volatile Sulphur and the inert Salt of the Philosophers, the former being an especially difficult substance to handle. Since Mercury does partake of danger, it is linked with the planet Mars, the idea being a visual throwback to a previous sigil which shows 'Mystical Mars' as a sigil composed of Sun, Moon and the four Elements (a form related to the MONAD of DEE 1564). The word chosen by GABELLA 1615 for Mars is a corrupt form of the Latinised Greek Pyroesis, obviously intended to suggest the burning nature - a quality which one would not immediately associate with Mercury, even though its volatility is well recognised. Here then, in one paragraph, two or three diagrams, and a few literary allusions, one has nuances which link the 'planet' Mercury with cosmic forces, with the Sun and the Earth, with the alchemical processes, with the danger of such processes, with inner fire, and indeed with the whole cosmic question of Martian forces, along with its well-known undertones of degeneration and regeneration (through its planetary rulership over the zodiacal Scorpio and Aries). There is no obvious way in which even an indication of such subtle 'sentient-thinking' - almost Chinese in its literary and pictographic allusion - may be expressed briefly, as would befit a dictionary entry. I have, therefore, stripped merely one idea from this multi-layer structure, and have left only the bibliographic reference as crutch for the reader. This is unfortunately the case for many of the entries, but the very nature of occultism appears to demand such treatment.

In certain cases I may appear to have exceeded my brief, for I have felt it appropriate to give meanings for sigils which have not been allocated a precise meaning by an author, but which have been 'explained' by a further image, sigil or symbolic design. This happens rarely in the text, but a notable example is from MICHAELSPACHER 1616, who gives twelve intriguing sigils alongside his images for the constellations or zodiacal signs. For example, the sigil  is given beneath the image for Taurus. These sigils are not explained within the text, but are in fact meaningful when the zodiacal associations with either certain alchemical processes or certain materials are taken into account. In this particular case, it is true that my entries give three alternative 'meanings' - a zodiacal, a materiality and a process - which may even be considered conjectural, but I feel that this is better than offering no explanation at all for this well-known group of sigils.

I have felt little compulsion to include the graphically interesting sigils given by such sources as HASSENFRATZ 1787, for whilst these do have the appearance of being 'occult sigils', and are in many respects derived from the tradition of alchemical symbolising, the system is designed to serve the new spirit of scientific inquiry, and may therefore not be considered occult in the sense understood within this present context. In a sense, it has been difficult to determine at what point one should draw a line between the 'occult' and what is merely exotic or or exoteric symbolism; no doubt my choices and exclusions will not please every reader. In this sense, then, save within the obvious occulta of literature, especially in those fields relating to Theosophy or Anthroposophy, and to some of the 'inventions' of KOCH 1930 or CIRLOT 1962, my study of the sigilla may be said to terminate with the work of DALTON 1808, or with the like-minded HASSENFRATZ 1787. If we seek a 'symbol' of the influence of eighteenth-century rationalism on the development of sigillic forms, then we may see it in the proposal of the latter author - authors, indeed - who sought to distinguish the 'earths' by the Aristotelian form  and the alkalis, potash and sodas, with the  thereby, in the innocent use of a sigil marking a profound break with an ancient tradition. This is by no means the place to make a study of the modern symbolism which has attached itself to modern Chemistry since those days - CROSLAND 1962 has sketched a useful outline of this development - but the fact that I end more or less with DALTON 1808 in the alchemical realm should not lead the reader to suppose that this is the end of the matter for other occult areas. It is worth observing, indeed, that whilst the alchemical tradition appears wholly swallowed in the modern Chemistry, until this latter once more discovers or recalls its original purpose, the sister arts of astrology and its embracing occultism have survived relatively intact, and are both spawning new sigils and symbols, though admittedly of less validity and vitality than those promulgated by the ancient mystery centres.

The very nature of the subject has required that I exercise a controlled personal discrimination, especially in those cases where the precise meanings of sigils are not known - for example, only a few of the sigils used on the embroideries of his figures by Raphael are still known to us, and therefore I have included only those which are understood (without entering into the refined areas of academic polemics). In the case of the majority of the sigils for spirits I have been especially careful to record only the most frequent. For example, I think that there would be little purpose in listing the numerous sigils given in TRITHEMIUS 1650, ranging from the relatively decorative  for the spirit Gamam, to the laconic forms such as  for Camiel,  for Malgaras, or  for Cabariel. In regard to the secret scripts which abound in occult manuscripts, I have resisted the temptation to include certain of the forms, alphabets and sigils which are not strictly occult, even when these have obviously been designed for purposes involved with what would nowadays be termed 'black magic'. Most of the demonological secret scripts are virtually the equivalent of private shorthand.

Above all, I have chosen to be limited in the choice of which sigils to include by size and complexity. It would have been aesthetically pleasing to give the large sigils for the demons which appear in certain of the more extensive demonological manuscripts, as for example the seventy-two spirit sigils from LEMEGETON 17C, of which the following are three:

Equally exciting would have been the record of the lovely sigils from the thirty-six decans recorded in LAMBECIUS 1500:

Unfortunately, the very complexity of their forms render it impossible to copy them out on the scale envisaged within the present format and scope. Exclusion is partly justified in any case simply because the majority of these are not so much sigils as decorative motifs or designs. One feels that in such exclusions due to size it is the Rosicrucian sigils which have suffered especially, as a glance through such a text as GEHEIME 1788 will confirm. Thus, even the ROSY CROSS itself was almost rejected as a sigil, for even the most simple form of the rose at the centre of the cross is graphically complicated. Reluctantly, I have also excluded the occult images in FREHER 1717, for these are highly pregnant symbols, verging almost on the domain of symbolic devices, rather than sigils, and whilst it would have been useful to give a record of this worthy summary of Boehme's cosmoconception, the present format precluded this. Naturally a sigil may range in size from a mere dot to the elaborate design of the LAMBECIUS 1500 decanates just reproduced, and this has meant that there has had to be some fine borderline at which a sigil is included or rejected because of size. I have been somewhat eccentric in regard to this borderline, and have not felt it necessary to explain myself, except in terms of what I consider to be useful within the expressed aims of this dictionary. For example, whilst the very sizes of the sigils given by

BERTHELOT 1887 for the so-called 'mystic drawings' from Greek sources, which no doubt were intended to represent alchemical operations (perhaps analogous to our own atomic equations) has led to rejection

I have none the less included the large and relatively complex sigil for SCORPIO from the mediaeval Italian source given as LUCCA 17C  and many variants of the sigils for fixed stars, such as those listed in Appendix 2, page 316, from AGRIPPA 1531.

Another factor I have had to bear in mind in regard to the question of inclusion and rejection is that of utility. Had I recorded sigils merely because they are 'occult', without reference to modern needs, then there would have been no end to the volumes of this book. I have been very selective in terms of what I feel is needed by a fairly specialist reading public. For example, following what I imagine to be the needs of a modern reader, I have rejected almost all the fascinating sigils in KIRCHER 1655, quaint and imaginative as they are - these sigils would be of value only to a specialist in seventeenth-century transcriptions of foreign alphabets, ideas and occulta, far removed from the traditions with which we are dealing here. In any case, such a specialist would be sufficiently familiar with KIRCHER 1655 not to require the aid of a dictionary, save in the questions of minutiae. In view of such an important exclusion, it might be argued that I have included some material which is dubious. For example, an alert reader might argue that the sigils for the lunar mansions which I do include are not in fact sigils, but merely visual guides or mnemonics, for those who sought to locate the areas along the ecliptic. They might argue, for example, that the form I give for VENTER ARIETIS, the second mediaeval lunar mansion, is not in fact a sigil, but three stars along the ecliptic, delta Arietis (sometimes called Butain), epsilon and zeta Arietis. Such an argument would be supported by an examination of the night sky, and also by the fact that the twenty-first mansion, called Desertum (by a delicate twist of irony, Al Baldaḥ, 'the City', is the Arabian manzil equivalent), is given no sigil by the source MANSIONES 14C, and is merely located between the mansions PASTOR and TRESS. No doubt the origin of these curious sigils - if indeed they are sigils - must be sought in the distribution of the fixed stars which mark the entrances to the twenty eight mansions - in marked contrast to the sigils for the signs and constellations. However, certain lists, as for example that given by ABANO 1303, show that early attempts were made to originate or preserve sigils for the lunar mansions, as though for magical purposes probably involving simple amulet construction.

It is especially in regard to sigils known to be derived from ancient texts that I have exercised discretion, since many of these have now little value, and in the majority of cases their precise meaning and application have been lost. Thus, many of the Greek sigils listed in such sources as FRESNE 1688 or OMONT 1894 have been rejected. Not only have many of the ancient sigils names which are obscure in application, and even the subject of remote academic argument, but also the names have frequently no known application within occult contexts. For example, the sigil  given under the name Ἀπόκρυφα which may mean 'a firebrand', 'a blister', or 'a chilblain', which may be a mistake for the Ἀποκλῖμα which is an astrological term for a sign preceding a nodal centre, may as a sigil be taken as a close relation to the Greek form of DAIMON - such considerations would lead more to confusion than clarification in an encyclopaedic entry. On the other hand, certain sigils which have survived, but which refer to ideas no longer used or understood in occult contexts, have an antiquarian or palaeoglyphic interest. For example, the sigil recorded by OMONT 1894 for the pars called Δόρυων, for which the sigil is  had a wide application as one of the important κλῶροι in Greek astrology: this sigil has been recorded for its antiquarian interest even though it refers to an idea long fallen out of use by astrologers.

The problem of 'meaning' is especially acute in the ancient texts, and in some cases it is possible to form an approximate idea of the particular occult significance of a sigil only from the form of that sigil itself.

For example, the Greek term $\Sigma\acute{\upsilon}\nu\omicron\delta\omicron\varsigma$ recorded by OMONT 1894, has itself a very wide application, meaning in general 'an assembly' or 'meeting', and it has specialised use within grammatical, fiscal and even sexual contexts. The Greek sigil attached to this name  is a compound of Greek forms for Moon and Sun, and these leave one in no doubt that a syzygy is implied, even though this could relate to the astrological aspect of conjunction or opposition, and even though it is possible that the sigil was intended to express a synodic relationship between the two luminaries, as these periods were of great importance to the Greek astrologers, and relate to certain 'mystic numbers' attached to the planets. More specifically, the sigil could refer to the metonic cycle of 19 solar years, 235 lunar months, or to the 25 so-called 'Egyptian years' of 409 lunar months. An attempt to arrive at a true understanding of the original meaning of the sigil is beset with difficulties beyond the capability of the merely academic mind, and such a sigil may be recorded for purely antiquarian reasons. At times, however, specialist knowledge may unravel the meaning of certain sigils otherwise lost to us so far as meaning is concerned. For example, the word $\kappa\lambda\acute{\eta}\rho\omicron\varsigma$ for which the sigil (more precisely, abbreviation)  has been given, has a meaning both within a magical connotation, involved with cleromancy, and within a specialised astrological meaning, relating to the modern conception of pars (for example, the $\kappa\lambda\acute{\eta}\rho\omicron\varsigma$ $\tau\acute{o}\chi\eta\varsigma$ is the equivalent of the Arabian pars fortunæ), and it is from the astrological contexts recorded by scholars such as FRESNE 1689 that one is led to ascribe an astrological meaning to the sigil. More generally, however, it is impossible, without extensive palaeographic study, to determine the particular application, and only a general hint of meaning is possible, with the result that it would be quite fatuous to include the sigil in a dictionary of this kind. Against this, it must be admitted that certain sigils with distinctive names have not been considered worthy of inclusion simply because their definitions are unknown, and their application within an occult context unclarified.

In relation to the Greek and Latin texts in particular, I have tried to avoid recording mere abbreviations, on the principle that this is supposed to be a dictionary of sigils. Naturally, this does not mean that I have excluded those abbreviations which are clearly intended to rank as sigilla (as for example the Greek sigil  just mentioned), and those sigils which are clearly derived from abbreviations, as for example the forms recorded under ASCENDANT. This rule has led to the exclusion of certain forms which historians might regard as sigils, and the inclusion of others which other historians might regard as being merely abbreviations. For example, from the Greek collection recorded in BERTHELOT 1885 I have included both  and  which in my opinion are sigils, even though derived from the the Greek terms Μαγιστεῖα and Αὐγεστός. Such exclusions and inclusions have been determined ultimately by my own personal opinions.

It goes without saying that I have not thought it necessary to insert sigils which have been preserved in erroneous form. It is unfortunately no rare thing for sigils, and indeed whole batches of sigils, to be printed in reverse from copperplate, or to be given upside-down by careless printers. For example, the second line of Divine Letters in AGRIPPA 1531 was printed upside-down in WHITEHEAD 1897, producing a series of magical formulae with which no ancient occultist was ever familiar. BARRETT 1801, an indefatigable and extremely careless recorder of occult lore, managed to get a line or so of his geomantic figures upside-down, and inevitably these have been recorded by certain later dubious 'historians', who have never bothered to examine primal sources, or are unaware of the graphic theory underlying the construction of such sigils.

I have made one or two important and necessary exceptions to this general rule. For example, I have recorded the mistakes made by HEYDON 1664 concerning certain of the geomantic spirit sigils, which he copied wrongly from AGRIPPA 1531 (see for example AMNIXTEL or SORATH), and in turn I have recorded the mistake of AGRIPPA 1531 in regard to HIRCUS. Such inclusions, against the general rule, were required because these widely published mistakes have themselves been adopted as the correct forms as a result of the industry and ignorance of later copyists.

The few appendices commencing at page 314 have been included in order to present the general reader with a synoptical view of the development of the more frequently used sigils. Especially interesting is the development of the astrological sigils for the zodiacal signs and planets, which may be studied from the selection given from four mediaeval manuscripts in comparison with the 'modern' forms preserved by AGRIPPA 1531, and given an apparently accidental imprimatur by the printing press. Of antiquarian interest is the comparison which may be made between the alchemical sigils taken from WORLIDGE 1651 with the neo-alchemical forms presented by BERGMANN 1785.

Occultism being what it is - a personal, if not to say heretical, approach to life - I have taken for granted that the reader will be either specialist enough, or interested enough, to make this dictionary his own by extending it. Towards this end, a number of blank sheets have been bound into the text, after the INDEX OF SIGILS, at page 410. I hope that the personal efforts of the reader will be such as to remedy the omissions and defects which the book doubtless promulgates. The very manner in which this text was constructed has determined that mistakes should occur. For technical reasons I was required to type out the text personally and then insert by hand the sigils which I had collected: it is inevitable that in such laborious transcribing of forms - in some cases, three or four times, between manuscript or book, and the final entry within this text - errors should have crept in. The trials and tedium of the index system - which in its very extent makes this Dictionary unique - must also have led to unobserved errors which will be far from unobservable to those who use the text frequently. If I may excuse such errors in advance, and perhaps deflect the darts of criticism, let me say that all the deficiencies are due merely to lack of scholarship, and in no way arise from lack of love for the subject. If this truth is held in mind, then my intentions will be misinterpreted only by what Crollius termed 'the wrong kind of people', from whom the ancients in any case sought to hide the true meanings of their sigils, ne in pravorum notitiam devenirent. A more important truth is expressed in the words of Carlyle which BLAVATSKY 1888 chose to head her chapter on 'Symbolism and Ideographs': A symbol is ever, to him who has eyes for it, some dimmer or clearer revelation of the God-like.

ACHIMER Ast. Mediaeval sigils for the binary alpha Virginis, sometimes called Arista or Spica, given by HERMETIS 13C  and EVANS 1922  in a form adopted as a variant for the modern sigil SPICA.

ACID Alc. LUEDY 1928

DIDEROT 1763 gives the sigil  for 'marine acid', which is probably derived from that given by GEOFFROY 1718 for 'acid of sea salt':  GEOFFROY 1718 gives the sigil  for acidic.

SCHEFFERS 1775 gives the sigil  for Acidum Salis;  for Acidum fluoris mineralis;  for Acidum Arsenici;  Acidum sacchari;  Acidum urinae or Phosphori;  Acidum formicarum and the sigil  for Acidum aereum (but see CARBON DIOXIDE).

The sigil for Lavoisier's Acide Nitreux is recorded by CROSLAND 1962 . See also ACIDUS and AQUA FORTIS.

ACIDUS Occ. Sigil given by HOMER 1723 for 'corporeal acidic aspect of the Spirit of the World (Anima Mundi)';  the third of the ten links in the so-called Golden Chain, presumably linked with the three elements within Boehme's first Divine Outpouring (see GRAY 1952).

ACIEL Mag. SCHEIBLE 1848 gives two simple variants (among several complex sigils) for this demon:

ACQUISTIO See AQUISITIO

ACTIVE Occ. CIRLOT 1962 gives the sigil  to represent 'the active, dynamic principle'. KOCH 1930 gives  for 'active intellect'.

ADAMAS Mag. A sigil given by SIGNA 17C among a list of precious stones, to be interpreted as diamond or adamantine  Almost certainly it is the quality of 'hardness' which is intended. ONOMASTICUM 1574

ADAMIC SCRIPT Occ. One of the numerous SECRET SCRIPTS derived from the Hebraic tradition of alphabets (see HEBRAIC SCRIPT), but adapted for the Roman alphabet. The version below is that recorded by CHRISTIAN 1870, with variant characters by RIVIERE 1938:

a	b	c	d	e	f	g	h	i	j	k	l	m	n

o	p	q	r	s	t	u	v	w	x	y	z

This script is almost identical with the Raphaelic script.

ADATIEL Mag. Two of the more simple sigil forms for this demon are recorded by SCHEIBLE 1848:

ADNACHIEL Mag. Mediaeval variants for the 'angel' of Sagittarius, given by BRAHE 1582:
See SPIRIT OF SAGITTARIUS

AERUGO Alc. Verdigris 'specifically from copper' is given the four sigils  by SCHNEIDER 1962, but these are almost certainly a confusion with traditional sigillic forms for AIR.

AIR Alc. The most common sigil for this 'second element' is  but this is by no means representative of the mixture of gases we know to today under the name 'Air': in the esoteric tradition, Air is, as WELLING 1735 puts it, 'The Spiritual and Invisible Air which existed before the descent of Lucifer': the Occult Air. A modern sigil is given by DE VORE 1947, within an astrological context: = whilst a 'cabbalistic' form is recorded by SHEPHERD 1971:  There are very many mediaeval variants, of which the following are the most common:

AIR HAND Pal. Sigil originated to serve modern chiromancy, intended to denote the male Air hand form, given in GETTINGS 1965:
The female Air hand form is represented by the sigil:

AIR TRIPLICITY Alc. Whilst in practical terms any of the sigils in the forms intended to denote AIR may be used to represent the astrological

Air triplicity (Gemini, Libra & Aquarius), AGRIPPA 1510 gives a composite sigil derived from the sigillic forms most frequently used for these zodiacal signs:

AKASA See AKASHYA

AKASHYA Occ. Sometimes called Asasha or Akasa, this is without doubt the oriental equivalent of the European invisible 'fifth' element, the QUINTESSENCE (see BLAVATSKY 1888):  The sigil is described as 'a transparent white circle with dots', the latter representing chhidra, holes or spaces in substance. A sigil is given by AVALON 1919  and is associated with the Visuddha or throat chakra.

ALABROTH Alc. Sigil given in ONOMASTICUM 1574, the substance being described as a 'sweet salt':

ALA CORVI Ast. Mediaeval sigil for the double star delta Corvi sometimes called Algorab, given in HERMETIS 13C  A variant of this sigil was given by AGRIPPA 1510 and printed in AGRIPPA 1531, with slight variations in a form which is now regarded as standard in European occultism:

ALAYOCH Ast. Mediaeval sigil for the fixed star alpha Aurigae, sometimes called HIRCUS, Amalthea and CAPELLA, given by HERMETIS 13C  which records also a related variant:

The following sigils are derived from late-medieval sources, and are sometimes used to denote the planet MERCURY, as for example in TRITHEMIUS 1503.

ALCALICUS Occ. Sigil given by HOMER 1723 as 'corporeal alkali' of the eternal becoming of God, the fourth in the ten links of the so-called Golden Chain, associated with the second (female, creative, expansive) of Boehme's Divine Outpourings (see GRAY 1952):

ALCHEMIST SCRIPT Occ. A large number of apparently unrelated secret scripts called 'Alchemical alphabets' have been preserved in occult and alchemical texts, the general idea being that sigils normally used to denote substances or processes are substituted for the letters of the alphabet. VIGNERE 1586 records a fairly typical example, which is given here, along with a number of variants to it from SELENUS 1624:

o	p	q	r	s	t	u	v	w	x	y	z

Ⓜ	Ⓤ	Ⓝ	Ⓢ				z		Ⓜ	Ⓢ	Ⓢ
o	p	q	r	s	t	u	v	w	x	y	z

The following three, all preserved by SOMMERHOFF 17C1 are again fairly typical of these scripts, combining astrological and alchemical sigils apparently without any real feeling for 'meaning' or secret symbolism:

ALDEBARAN Ast. HERMETIS 13C gives the sigil for alpha Tauri:

ALEMBIC Alc. In esoteric alchemy, the symbol is used for the human physical body, in which the Great Work of transmutation takes place; in exoteric alchemy, the term refers to the vessel used for the process of distillation. The latter meaning is probably intended by the following mediæval sigils:

ALEPH Occ. The first letter of the Hebrew alphabet, for which very many derivatives have been compounded within the tradition of SECRET SCRIPTS, amongst which a selection from BARTOLOZZI 1675 may be regarded as the most well known:  See however HEBRAIC SCRIPT. The letter and its sigil derivatives have been used generally to suggest the idea of 'beginning'. WIRTH 1927 equates aleph with the first arcana of the Tarot pack, the JUGGLER, and thus with zodiacal Taurus, the constellation Orion, and with the Mercury of the Alchemists. He traces a graphic etymology with the forms which demonstrate a vestigial bull's head, or that of an Ox:

Many related sigils have been adopted for Christian use, with graphic etymological roots which go back to pre-Christian traditions. TESTA 1962 records a series of sigils from such early Christian sources, all of which are related to the alpha Λ $\tilde{\Lambda}$ ∇ Δ a series which culminates in the form of the triple alpha, symbolic of the Holy Trinity: $\overline{\Lambda}$ \triangle

AMBRIEL Mag. The most common mediaeval characters for the 'angel' of Gemini are given by BRAHE 1582:

However, the name is used also for one of the geomantic spirits for which AGRIPPA 1531 gives the sigil  and HEYDON 1664:

TRITHEMIUS 1503 gives a variant:

AMEN Rel. Mediaeval sigil recorded by CAPPELLI 1949:  It is very likely that the cross which is so commonly found on magical invocations and large-scale sigils was intended to evoke the power of Amen:

AMETHYST Mag. SIGNA 17C gives the sigil

AMISSIO Geo. Sigil for one of the sixteen geomantic figures, for which a multitude of variants (stars, dots, floral devices, etc.) is used in the same four-fold arrangement:  Amissio is linked by AGRIPPA 1531 with the element of Fire, the planet Venus and the zodiacal sign Libra. The following sigils are derived from late-mediaeval sources, and are sometimes used to denote the planet Venus, as for example in TRITHEMIUS 1503.

AGRIPPA 1531

HEYDON 1664 gives  but this is probably wrongly copied from the source above.

AMMONIA Alc. Sometimes referred to as volatile alkali, the mediaeval sigil is recorded by GESSMANN 1906:  Two common sigils are also used, though these are so ubiquitous, and are intended to cover so many other denotations and connotations, that they render most texts obscure. PORTA 1593 gives the triangle  for example, whilst the star is also quite common, as for example recorded by CARBONELLI 1925 for SAL AMMONIAC:

AMNIXIEL Mag. Supposed by HEYDON 1664 to be a geomantic spirit, for which he gives the sigil  but this is wrongly copied from the Hebrew of AGRIPPA 1531, who gives the sigil  for the genius of LOETITIA and of zodiacal Pisces.

AMPHORA Alc. Mediaeval sigil recorded by GESSMANN 1906

ANAEL Mag. The most common mediaeval sigil for the angel of Venus is given by TRITHEMIUS 1503:  though in theory any of the common sigils for VENUS may be used, as for example in SHEPHERD 1971.

BARRETT 1801 confuses this sigil with that for the Archangel

MICHAEL:  SCHEIBLE 1848 gives several other variants, including:    See SPHERE OF VENUS

ANGEL Occ. A Greek sigil is recorded by BERTHELOT 1885:  whilst a common mediaeval sigil (an abbreviation, in fact) is given by CHASSANT 1884 for angelis:  KIRCHER 1655 gives the form whilst OLIVER 1826 gives the sigil  as 'an ancient Egyptian symbol for the angel'. SUCHER 1975 appears to link the sigil for LEO with the sphere of the Angels, which is traditionally the SPHERE OF THE MOON:

ANGER See WRATH

ANGULAR Ast. A modern sigil for this astrological concept is given by DE VORE 1947, for both 'angular houses' and 'angular signs':

ANIMĀ See SOUL and ANIMALIA

ANIMALIA Occ. Sigil given by HOMER 1723 as the sixth of the ten links in the so-called Golden Chain:  In the Theosophic tradition (see BOEHME 1730) the term animalia does not imply brutish, as derived from 'animal', but rather soul-enfilled, as from the Latin anima: in later theosophy the term would refer to a being possessed of an astral body. GESSMANN 1906   WIRTH 1931

ANIMATE WORLD Occ. Sigil given by KIRCHER 1655 under this heading, but probably the author had in mind the idea of the ASTRAL WORLD:

ANIMUS Rel. A mediaeval contraction is given by CAPPELLI 1949:

ANISE Alc. Mediaeval sigil recorded by SHELTON 17C:

ANKH Occ. Sometimes called ank and ansated cross, it is one of the sigils used from earliest times against barrenness (see BUDGE 1930):  BLAVATSKY 1888 sees it as a form of VENUS (♀), and claims that it symbolises 'that mankind and all animal life had stepped out of the divine spiritual circle and fallen into physical male and female generation'. Additionally, BLAVATSKY 1888 claims that it is the 'sign of life, the living, an oath, the covenant... It is the hieroglyphic RU () set upright on the Tau-cross'. The same source gives  as the earliest Ankh-cross, a loop which combines both a circle and a cross in one image, and which is called the Ankh-tie, the pasa of Siva. TESTA 1962 gives several forms of the Ankh-cross, of which the following three are representative:    STEINER 1906 calls the ankh the Tao, the 'I am' which streamed through the whole world in early days. See also CROSS, ORIGIN and RU.

ANNEAL Alc. In the early alchemical sense, this word was intended to mean calcinate, to 'burn' or 'set on fire', and it is in this sense that the mediaeval sigils recorded by GESSMANN 1906 must be taken, for they almost certainly do not relate to the enamelling or encaustic processes as such:               See also CALCINATE.

ARCHETYPES Occ. In her complex numerological study, BLAVATSKY 1888 lists a number of graphic archetypes which combine in various ways to express occult or hermetic ideas - in this she was following a tradition perhaps introduced by AGRIPPA 1510 and developed by GABELLA 1615. The most important of these archetypes are the central point (·), the three (△), the five (☆) and the seven (▢), which may be symbolised by (). A further set of four archetypal sigils are explained at length by WIRTH 1927:    See in this connexion HERMETIC TETRAD.

The basic archetypes give rise to such symbolism as is found expressed in the sigils for BODY ERECT, CROSS, DECADE, DEITY, ETHERIC, OGDOAD, ONE, SEPTENARY MAN, and so on.

The printed sigil is derived from the manuscript tradition, such as LAMBECIUS 1500  and AGRIPPA 1510  The sigil is said by AGRIPPA 1510 to be based on the shape of the Ram's horns, but this is unlikely. SUCHER 1971 suggests that it is a pictograph of exploding and imploding spirit, whilst GABELLA 1615 explains its form as a graphic expression of the equinox, and gives it a curious sigil (O.O) which is linked with one of the sigils for FIRE.

ASBESTOS Alc. Two ancient Greek sigils recorded by BERTHELOT 1885:

ASCENDANT Ast. Three variant sigils of circa 500AD, graphically derived from the word horoscopus, the name originally given in the Greek astrological tradition to the degree of ecliptic ascending in a given chart, are listed by NEUGEBAUER 1959:
 Sometimes an abbreviation for the word Ascendant, and even for 'first house' prima domus, is also used:

The sigil recorded for oriens in MANSIONIBUS 1482  appears to be part of a secret alphabet (since the letter 'd' is named septentrio, yet is a letter never used for the Imus Coeli).

ASCENDING NODE Ast. The north NODE of astrology has from ancient times been signified by the sigil  but the following form is copied from an ancient Greek text by OMONT 1894  This is said to be the Kephali or anabibazon, the equivalent of the modern CAPUT of modern astrology, but the sigil is probably a mistake, the correct form being given in the same manuscript for the CAUDA, the Greek oura or katababazon:

ASTEROID Ast. Modern sigil given by NEROMAN 1937:

ASTRAL WORLD Occ. Mediaeval sigils given by KIRCHER 1655 for the sidereum, by which he probably meant the 'astral world', rather than the stellatum, or zone of the fixed stars:
See also ANIMALIA and ANIMATE WORLD.

ASTROLOGER Ast. A fifteenth-century contraction for astrologus is recorded by CAPPELLI 1949:

ASTRONOMIA Ast. A mediaeval contraction is recorded by CHASSANT 1884, though there is little difference between astronomia and astrologia in mediaeval texts: ast^{oa}

ATHANOR Alc. Most of the sigils for the constant-heat digesting furnace of exoteric alchemy consist of vestigial drawings, and are scarcely sigils as such. DIDEROT 1763 gives a fairly standard common example:

GESSMANN 1906 records three mediaeval sigils under the name of Atheneum:

ATLANTIDES See PLEIADES

ATLANTIS Occ. BLAVATSKY 1888 gives the sigil  for the 'earth globe' esoterically seen as the 'unity of the spiritual world' - the top half of the circle being contrasted with the duality of the lower half, the symbol of the duality of the 'material world', which she sees as a fitting sigil to express the Earth state when the male-female polarity fully developed. The sigil may therefore be taken as relating to the Epoch of Atlantis, rather than to the continental mass itself. See also EARTH.

AVACHIEL Mag. Mediaeval sigil given by AGRIPPA 1531 as ruling spirit of zodiacal Sagittarius:  The same spirit was supposed by HEYDON 1664 to be a geomantic genius of AQUISITIO.

AYN Occ. The sixteenth letter of the Hebrew alphabet (see HEBRAIC SCRIPT), for which many sigillic derivatives are given within the tradition of secret alphabets, as for example in the well-known series recorded by BARTOLOZZI 1675:

WIRTH 1927 equates Ayn with the Tarot arcanum the HOUSE OF GOD, with the constellation Ophiucus and the zodiacal sign SCORPIO. In his record of the vestigial pictographic forms, he suggests a link with the concept of the Eye:

This alphabet is one of the HEBRAIC SCRIPTS, and appears to be very closely related to the so-called CHALDEAN SCRIPT.

BACCHUS Ast. Sigil introduced by THIÉRENS 1931 for the 'planetary principle' of the Roman Bacchus, the Greek Dionysos:

BALM Alc. Two mediaeval sigils recorded by DIDEROT 1763:

BALNEUM MARIAE See GRADES OF FIRE.

BARBIEL Mag. Several mediaeval sigils have survived for this demon, of which the one recorded by SCHEIBLE 1848 is the most simple:  The name is used also for the 'angel of Scorpio', for which BRAHE 1582 records three sigils:
See also SPIRIT OF SCORPIO.

BARCHIEL Mag. BRAHE 1582 gives two sigils for this demon whilst AGRIPPA 1531 records a sigil which is linked with the geomantic tradition:

BARYTES Alc. DALTON 1808

BATH Alc. SOMMERHOFF 1701 gives sigils specifically for the Balneum Mariae GESSMANN 1906 gives   but see GRADES OF FIRE for the more specialist sigils.

BAZARACHIEL Mag. Three mediaeval sigils recorded by SCHEIBLE 1848 for this demon:

BEELZEBUB Mag. The sigil given by SCHEIBLE 1848 is merely an abbreviation  and this demon is more frequently depicted in the form of a fly, sometimes in a vestigial drawing, in reference to the supposed meaning of his name as Lord of the Flies.

BEFAPES Mag. One of two sigils for demons linked with the planet Mars, given by AGRIPPA 16C:

BELL METAL Alc. Mediaeval sigil for aes campanorum given in SIGNA 17C:  GESSMANN 1906 gives:

BELOCH Mag. Name (perhaps confused with Beliar) and sigil given by

HEYDON 1664 for spirit, intended to represent the letter B in the secret alphabet of 'Angels and Genii':

BENJAMINE FLOWERS Alc. Mediaeval sigils recorded by GESSMANN 1906:

BETH Occ. The second letter of the Hebrew alphabet (see HEBRAIC SCRIPT) for which very many derivative sigillic forms are preserved within the tradition of secret alphabets, of which the most well-known are those recorded by BARTOLOZZI 1675:
WIRTH 1927 equates Beth with the Tarot arcana LADY POPE, and with the constellation Cassiopeia. In his list of pictorial derivatives for the letter, he suggests an association with the idea of a Camel, but the vestigial drawing was almost certainly a 'house', a concept which is reflected in the sound-value of the letter:

BETHOR Mag. Mediaeval sigil for planetary spirit of Jupiter recorded by TRITHEMIUS 1503
SCHEIBLE 1848  SHEPHERD 1971

BEZOAR STONE Alc. Several variant forms of a simple graphic are given by GESSMANN 1906:

BILE Alc. BERTHELOT 1885 records the following sigil from an early Greek manuscript which is clearly a short-form for chyle:

BORNOGO Mag. One of the two demons linked with the Sun, recorded by

AGRIPPA 16C:

BOTARION Alc. The sigil recorded from an ancient Greek manuscript by

BERTHELOT 1885 is probably intended to denote a Digestion Vessel:

BOTTLE Alc. The word in its nounal use is designated usually by a simple vestigial drawing, as in the mediaeval example given by GESSMANN 1906  which represents the ampulla of the alchemists. When a verbal use is intended, then a sigil recorded by GESSMANN 1906 may be used which in fact means 'bottle when cleared':  Sometimes the sigils for LUTUM SAPIENTIAE are used in a strictly esoteric sense for the idea of bottling and sealing, though this is probably a late and inappropriate use of the sigils.

BRACHIUM Alc. Sigil given by MANSIONES 14C for the 7th of the mediaeval lunar mansions, called Al Dhira in the Arabic system:

A sigil for the amulet relating to this lunar mansion (called finis Geminorum) is given by ABANO 1303:

BRASS Alc. There is much confusion regarding the alloys of the alchemists, and this naturally reflects in the sigils. In some cases the sigils for aes refer to any crude metal dug from the earth; in other cases to the common alloy of copper and tin. The alloy of copper and zinc is probably intended for the majority of the following sigils, but the meaning may only be derived from the context. For example, it is likely that the forms given by GESSMANN 1906 designate COPPER and even aes ustum.

 DIDEROT 1763  GESSMANN 1906

BRICK DUST Alc. As with the sigils for BRICK, the most common forms are vestigial drawings, as for example those given by GESSMANN 1906 below. Sigils are also derived from the initials of the Latin farina laterum, as for example in the forms given by DIDEROT 1763:
 GESSMANN 1906

BRIMSTONE Alc. A sigil is given under this name by KOCH 1930  but this is actually the late-mediaeval form for 'black sulphur' - see SULPHUR NIGRUM - 'brimstone' being the vernacular at one time for SULPHUR.

BRONZE Alc. The observations under BRASS are relevant to this metal, though bronze is an alloy more easily identifiable through the sigils, being more commonly the aes of the alchemists. However, confusion still reigns, and sigils for BRASS and COPPER are often employed in cases where bronze should be sigillated.

CANCER Ast. Sigils for the zodiacal sign of the Crab, used indiscriminately for the constellation of the same name. Printed version of the sigil derived from one of several related forms in the Graeco-Byzantine tradition (see NEUGEBAUER 1959 below), given by HYGINUS 1482:  Said by AGRIPPA 1510 to be based on the movement of the crab, though this is entirely fanciful.

CAPELLA Ast. Mediaeval sigil for the fixed star alpha Aurigae, given in HERMETIS 13C under the name of ALAYOCH this sigil was wrongly transmitted by AGRIPPA 1510, with the result that the sigil in common use may be confused with that for ALDEBARAN.

The CUPELLA is sometimes called a 'capella'. See also ALAYOCH

CAPILLUS Ast. Sigil for the eleventh lunar mansion, called Al Zubrah in the Arabic astrological system, given by MANSIONES 14C:
A sigil for the amulet linked with this mansion, called Venter Leonis, is recorded by ABANO 1303:

CAPRICORN Ast. Zodiacal sign of the Goat-fish, frequently mis-termed the Goat: the sigils are used indiscriminately for the constellation of the same name. AGRIPPA 1531 derives the mediaeval sigil from the tail of the goat, but this is entirely fanciful, and it is likely that the common form is derived from the duality of the goat-fish form. The printed version is from the manuscript tradition, as given by HYGINUS 1482  FIRMICUS 1499  and LILLY 1647
The sigils for this sign are numerous, and to avoid confusion the entries below have been set out in three sections - MODERN VARIANTS, COMMON VARIANTS (on the modern forms), and RARE forms.

CAPUT Ast. Usually the single word caput in an astrological context refers to caput draconis, 'the dragon's head', originally an astrological term, but now used in astrological, alchemical and geomantic contexts. The term in its astrological sense refers to the Moon's north Node, the point at which the ascending orbit of the Moon intersects the ecliptic. The sigil most commonly used is mediaeval in origin, derived from the ancient Greek (see NODE), as for example the form given by LILLY 1647:  The entry below is divided into two parts - one listing the astrological and alchemical sigils, the other listing the geomantic sigils.

It is not uncommon for modern ephemerides to give this sigil in a form which may be confused with that more accurately used for LEO:

GEOMANTIC

The most common form is that used for one of the sixteen geomantic figures:  This caput draconis is linked by AGRIPPA 1531 with the element Earth and the zodiacal sign Virgo: a multitude of variants (stars, dots, floral devices, etc.) is used to denote the same four-fold arrangement. The following sigils are from late mediaeval sources, and are sometimes used in astrological and magical contexts to connote the force and nature of astrological caput (above) as for example in TRITHEMIUS 1503.

AGRIPPA 1531      the same source gives also the form  which is surely wrong.

HEYDON 1664 records a sigil  which is also incorrect.

CAPUT ALGOL Ast. Mediaeval sigil for fixed star reputed to be the most evil in the skies, the modern beta Persei, given by HERMETIS 13C in an original form:  EVANS 1922 (mediaeval):
A related variant is recorded by AGRIPPA 1510, which has become the standard modern form for the sigil:

CAPUT ARIETIS See CORNUA ARIETIS

CAPUT CANCRI See OCULUS

CAPUT CANIS Ast. The 5th of the lunar mansions, called Al Hak'ah in CAPUT MORTUUM Alc. Usually this alchemical residue is signified by a vestigial drawing of a human skull, the 'death's head', but one or two other variants exist:

CARCEER Geo. Sigil for one of the sixteen geomantic figures:  A multitude of variants (dots, stars, floral devices, etc.) are used to denote the same four-fold arrangement. Carcer, 'prison', is linked by AGRIPPA 1531 with the element of Earth, the planet Saturn, and the zodiacal sign Pisces. The following sigils are derived from the mediaeval tradition, and are sometimes used to denote the planet Saturn, as for example in TRITHEMIUS 1503.

CASSRIEL Mag. SCHEIBLE 1848 gives several sigils for this demon:

CASTOR OIL Alc. BERTHELOT 1885 records an ancient Greek sigil for this liquid:

CAUDA Ast. Usually the single word cauda refers to cauda draconis (the dragon's tail), which was originally an astrological term, but which is now used in both alchemical and geomantic contexts as well. In the astrological tradition it was intended to denote the Moon's south NODE, the point at which the descending orbit of the moon intersects the ecliptic. The sigil most commonly used is mediaeval (though derived from the ancient Greek), as given in LILLY 1647:  The entries below are divided into two parts, the first being ASTROLOGICAL, the second GEOMANTIC.

A basic sigil is given for one of the sixteen geomantic figures, called cauda draconis:  A multitude of variant sigils exists (with stars, dots, floral devices, etc.) used to express the same four-fold arrangement. Cauda is linked by AGRIPPA 1531 with the element Fire, and the zodiacal sign Sagittarius. The following sigils are derived from the mediaeval tradition, and are sometimes used in astrological and magical contexts to express the idea of cauda draconis in its astrological sense, as for example in TRITHEMIUS 1503.

CAUDA CAPRICORNI Ast. Mediaeval sigil for the fixed star delta

Capricorni, sometimes called Deneb Algedi, given in HERMETIS 13C

AGRIPPA 1531 gives a variant which has entered the European occult tradition:

CAUDA LEONIS Ast. The 12th of the lunar mansions, called al sarfah in Arabic astrological system, for which MANSIONES 14C gives a mediaeval sigil: - ⊙ - -

A series of sigils linked with this lunar mansion (called finis Leonis et principis Virginis, and perhaps linked with SPICA) is given for amuletic use by ABANO 1303:

CAUDA SCORPIONIS Ast. The 19th of the mediaeval lunar mansions, called Al shaula in the arabic astrological system, a sigil for which is given by MANSIONES 14C:

A sigil linked with this lunar mansion (called finis Scorpionis et caput Sagittarii) is given for amuletic use by ABANO 1303:

CAUDA URSAE Ast. Mediaeval sigil for the double star alpha Ursae Minoris, sometimes called Polaris, Stella Polaris, Cynosura or the Pole Star, given by HERMETIS 13C:

CELANDINE Alc. BERTHELOT 1885 records an ancient Greek sigil:

CELESTIAL SCRIPT Occ. A number of secret alphabets, variously called 'celestial', 'angelic' or 'supercelestial', has been recorded in various occult texts, among the most well-known of which is that given by AGRIPPA 1531:

κ	ϙ	λ	γ	π	ι	τ	π	υ	'	ϙ	λ	ν	ι
ο	υ	ε	ζ	η	γ	ψ	ρ

The more or less genuine 'celestial' scripts have been derived from the Hebraic alphabet (see HEBRAIC SCRIPT), but some writers, such as RIVIERE 1938 have adapted these for the Roman alphabet. Below is his 'angelic' alphabet, compared with his 'celestial':

N	□		Γ			J	E	Π		γ	3	□	7
a	b	c	d	e	f	g	h	i	j	k	l	m	n
o	p	q	r	s	t	u	v	w	x	y	z

But see also SECRET SCRIPTS.

CELESTIAL VAPOUR Alc. The sigil given in the collection of Greek texts by BERTHELOT 1885 relates to aithali ouranou: —☉— which BERTHELOT 1885 translates somewhat materialistically as 'celestial vapour', though the form of the sigil would suggest something of a spiritual nature - perhaps relating to the smoke of the pythonic oracles, or even (though more doubtfully) to the etheric forces described in the theosophical tradition.

CEMENT Alc. In most contexts it is clear that a verbal use is intended by the sigil.

CHALAMINT STONE Alc. FRANKLYN 1627

CHALCITE Alc. The sigil is derived from an abbreviation of the Greek word recorded by BERTHELOT 1885, and probably relates to copper pyrites:

CHALDEAN SCRIPT Occ. One of the numerous secret alphabets in the tradition of HEBRAIC SCRIPT. The alphabet recorded here is that given by VIGNERE 1586:

κ	ε	λ	γ	π	ι	ζ	η	υ	ϑ	δ	β	σ	ι

ο	υ	φ	χ	ψ	τ	ω	π

The alphabet has nothing to do with the historic Chaldean cuneiform, but in mediaeval terminology Chaldean was synonymous with astrologer.

CHALK Alc. Two mediaeval sigils are recorded by GESSMANN 1906:
FRANCKLYN 1627 gives two sigils for 'chalk containing gold':

CHAOS Occ. DEE 1564 gives the sigil  but see also ELEMENTS and ABYSS.

CHARACTER Occ. A short-form or abbreviation for character in the sense of 'sigil', and with reference to the planetary or alchemical symbols, is found only in manuscripts, as for example in CONJURATION 14C:
There exists a wide range of different sigils referred to in occult literature as 'characters', many of which are listed in this dictionary under the heading of PLANETARY SYMBOLS: but see also CHARACTERS OF ELEMENTS and HERMETIC SIGIL.

CHARACTERS See PLANETARY SYMBOLS.

CHARACTERS OF ELEMENTS Alc. The following sigils are given by BRAHE 1582 as characters, but these are not intended to act as sigils in the ordinary sense for the relevant elements: they are intended for simple amuletic use.

AIR:

EARTH:

FIRE:

WATER:

For the traditional forms, see AIR, EARTH, ELEMENTS, FIRE, QUINTESSENCE, THREE AIRS, THREE EARTHS, THREE FIRES, THREE WATERS and WATER.

CHARCOAL Alc. Two mediaeval sigils given by GESSMANN 1906:

CHARIOT Occ. WIRTH 1927 relates this 7th arcanum of the Tarot pack to the Hebraic ZAIN, and associates with it the sigil  which is the so-called CROSS of Lorraine, which WIRTH 1927 sees as the primitive form of the Zain (though a more precise etymology for the graphic vestigial form is that of a 'decorative staff' within the Egyptian hieroglyphics). WIRTH 1927 also associates the two sigils  with the arcanum, presumably because these are to be found within the compositional structure of the design.

CHENOR Mag. Sigil used for a spirit (perhaps the original Chanief) by HEYDON 1664 to represent the letter C in the secret writing called the 'Alphabet of Angels and Genii':

CHERUBIM Occ. SUCHER 1975 appears to link the sigil for Aquarius  with the sphere of the Seraphim, which is traditionally associated with either the 'sphere' of the stellatus or with the zodiacal sphere itself. In effect, each of the sigils for the four fixed signs of the zodiac (TAURUS, LEO, SCORPIO and AQUARIUS) could theoretically be used to represent one of the individual cherubs, but most symbolists have recourse to pictorial images, rather than sigils.

CHRIST Rel. A large number of sigils, most often involved with the symbolism of the CROSS, have been used to symbolise Christ, and the following consists merely of a selection taken from occult sources:

SCHEIBLE 1848

BOCK 1931

SHEPHERD 1971

VERARDI 1972

GETTINGS 1978

TESTA 1962 gives a whole series of 'gnostic Samaritan-Christian' sigils which might be said to symbolise Christ:

The same source lists also a number of related sigils under CHRISTMON and JESUS, along with CHASSANT 1884 records a mediaeval range:
 See also CHRIST TRIUMPHANT.

CHRISTMON Rel. Very many mediaeval and modern variants are recorded, most of them relating in effect to CHRIST or CROSS.

KOCH 1930 gives   whilst TESTA 1962 records some early sigils derived from the Judaeo-Christian tradition:

CHRIST TRIUMPHANT Rel. A series of sigils recorded by TESTA 1962 relates to a graphic tradition which abbreviates the sign of Victory

(N-IC-A) with the V (VAU) of Jesus:

The magical alphabet of Anael in SCHEIBLE 1848 gives a sigil for Christ Triumphant:

See also CHRIST, CHRISTMON and JESUS.

CHRYSOCOLLA Alc. Early mediaeval sigil, probably derived from the ancient Greek, recorded by SHEPHERD 1971 for solder of gold:

CHRYSTALLUS Alc. Two sigils given by SIGNA 17C:

CINNABAR OF ANTIMONY Alc. Two sigils given by DIDEROT 1763:

CIRCULATING FIRE Alc. Mediaeval sigils given by GESSMANN 1906, mainly derived from the common sigil for FIRE:

CIRCULUS DUPLEX Occ. Sigil given by HERMES 1613 in a series of graphic occult structures:  The duplex symbolises the idea of spiritual growth - an inner quality is protected within the nutrient of a shielding outer quality. The sigil may also be interpreted as being symbolic of the alchemical process itself.

CLAVIS Occ. Sigil derived from Dee's MONAD by Boehme, and called by him 'the Seven Forms of Spirit' relating to his Wirkende Eigenschaften (see MUSES 1951):  The sigil combines the 'Seven Forms' of the seven planets:
 Saturn-Moon which gives 'Harsh desiring Will':
 Mercury-Jupiter which gives 'Bitter or stinging':
 Mars-Venus which gives 'Anguish till the "flash of Fire"':
 Sun which itself represents the 'flash of Fire' and the 'Fire World':
 Venus-Mars which gives 'Light or Love, where the water of Eternal Life flows':
 Jupiter-Mercury which gives 'Noise, sound or Mercury':
 Moon-Saturn which gives 'Substance of Nature':

MUSES 1951 presents variants of these, according to Freher, in the order given above, but with a more thorough interpretation and with the sigillic forms:

CONGELATION Alc. MICHAELSPACHER 1616 gives the sigil  next to the sign or constellation Taurus, either to symbolise the alchemical process of Congelation, or (less likely) the alchemical Bitumen.

CONJUNCTIO Geo. Sigil for one of the sixteen geomantic figures:
A multitude of variants (stars, dots, floral devices, etc.) is used to denote the same four-fold arrangement. Conjunctio is linked by AGRIPPA 1531 with the element of Air, the planet Mercury and the zodiacal sign Virgo. The following sigils are derived from latemediaeval sources, and are sometimes used to denote the planet Mercury, as for example in TRITHEMIUS 1503.

AGRIPPA 1531

CONJUNCTION Ast. An aspect in which two or more planets are in the same degree of the zodiac. The common form of the sigil is precisely that found in mediaeval manuscripts, as for example in SIGILLIS 17C ASTROLOGICAL 15C  KALENDAR 15C
HOROSCOPE 1614

A series of individual sigils, intended to denote particular planetary conjunctions has been given by AGRIPPA 1510:

SATURN AND JUPITER:

SATURN AND MARS:

JUPITER AND MARS

SATURN, JUPITER AND MARS:

CONSTRUCTION Occ. A modern sigil given by CIRLOT 1962 to represent 'the constructive principle within totality', symbolised by the TERNARY acting upon the QUATERNARY within INFINITY, thus:

CONVERT Alc. Sigils used only in descriptions of alchemical processes in the mediaeval form given by GESSMANN 1906:

COOPERTA Ast. Fifteenth of the mediaeval lunar mansions, called Al Ghafr in the Arabic astrological system, given by MANSIONES 14C: °°

COPPER Alc. Since the occult theory of signatures links copper with the planet VENUS, virtually any of the sigils for this planet may also be used to denote the metal in an alchemical context. The following sigils appear to have been used specifically to denote the metal:

SHELTON 17C

SIGNA 17C

SOMMERHOFF 1701 gives the series of sigils  and notes also that this is the corpus immundum et imperfectum, an idea related to the esoteric astrological tradition regarding the planet Venus. Additionally, SOMMERHOFF 1701 gives

The following sigils have been recorded by GESSMANN 1906, relating to the alchemical copper:

COPPER IRON

COPPER ORE

COPPER PLATE

COPPER SPLINT

BERTHELOT 1885 gives an ancient Greek form for cyprus copper and one for copper ore  in addition to two sigils from chalkos and two for copper pure:

WORLIDGE 1651 gives the following list, among which may be one or two dubious forms:

COPPERAS Alc. Term generally applied in alchemical texts to the sulphates of copper, iron and zinc (blue, green and white copperas, respectively), but now generally applied to the iron sulphates, also called green VITRIOL. Another term is WHITE VITRIOL. Copperwater is another general term, for which ONOMASTICUM 1574 gives:  BERTHELOT 1885 records the Greek form  which is derived from the abbreviation of chalcanthos.

COPPER CALCINATE Alc. BERTHELOT 1885 records an ancient Greek sigil which is identical to that used for ordinary COPPER:

COPPER FILINGS Alc. Two sigils common used in the mediaeval period for COPPER are listed by BERTHELOT 1885 from ancient Greek texts as denoting copper-filings:

COPPER LEAF Alc. BERTHELOT 1885 records two ancient Greek sigils which were used for copper leaf:

COPPER ORE Alc. BERTHELOT 1885 gives an ancient Greek sigil which was still in use during the mediaeval period, though sometimes used for COPPER:

COR LEONIS Ast. Mediaeval sigil for the triple star alpha Leonis, sometimes called 'the little king', given in HERMETIS 130

CORNUA ARIETIS Ast. First of the mediaeval lunar mansions, called Al Sheratain in the Arabic astrological system, for which a sigil has been recorded by MANSIONES 14C:

A sigil linked with this mansion, but used for amuletic purposes, is recorded by ABANO 1303:

CORNUA SCORPIONIS Ast. The 16th of the mediaeval lunar mansions, called Al Jubana in the Arabic astrological system, a sigil for which is given by MANSIONES 14C:

CORONA Ast. The 17th of the mediaeval lunar mansions, called Ikhlil al Jabhah in the Arabic astrological system, for which a sigil is given by MANSIONES 14C:

A sigil designed for amuletic use, and linked with this mansion (called finis Libri) is given by ABANO 1303:

CORPUS See BODY

COR SCORPIONIS Ast. Mediaeval sigil for the binary alpha Scorpii, sometimes called Antares, given by HERMETIS 13C:

AGRIPPA 151C gives a variant which has become the commonly accepted sigil:  EVANS 1922

The same name is used also for the 18th of the mediaeval lunar mansions, (called Al Kalb in the Arabic astrological system), and a sigil for this is recorded by MANSIONES 14C:

COR TAURI Ast. The fourth of the mediaeval lunar mansions, called Al Sabaran, in the Arabic astrological system, a sigil for which is given by MANSIONES 14C:  But see also ALDEBARAN.

A sigil clearly linked with this fourth mansion, but called Caput tauri et venter, is given an amuletic use by ABANO 1303:

The mansion called Caput Tauri is the third of the lunar mansions, and is given the sigil  by MANSIONES 14C, and the amuletic sigil  by ABANO 1303, who terms it finis Arietis.

COSMIC EGG Occ. In his account of Tarot symbolism, WIRTH 1927 gives the sigil frequently used for CANCER  as the 'fecundated cosmic egg' of the Chinese. See also PHILOSOPHIC EGG.

COSMOS Occ. Sigil derived by WELLING 1735 to symbolise the complete universal character of light and darkness working together:  HOMER 1723 gives the two sigils   as the last in the chain of God's coming into being, the so-called Golden Chain, representative of the Cosmos, as opposed to the CHAOS at the beginning of the chain.

COVERED POT Alc. CROLLIUS 1670  But see CRUCIBLE.

CREATION Occ. A sigil given by WELLING 1735 is taken to symbolise the six days of Creation, or the elements as an outflow of the Divine Fire of the Godhead:

BLAVATSKY 1888 gives the simple sigil  along with a profoundly esoteric account of the relationship between the sign TAURUS and the PLEIADES in the constellation of that name, which she terms (in full accordance with the Cabbalistic tradition) the sidereal septenate, which manifests from the 'concealed  '.

The relationship between the 'invisible' creative force of the sign Aries and the manifestation of the 'matter' of Taurus is also given a sigillic form by SUCHER 1975 in his highly personal graphic symbolism. He claims that the creative force of Aries  may 'in a symbolic sense' be read as the TAU form:  But see also SACRIFICE.

A further attempt to symbolise in graphic form the idea of creation has been made by KOCH 1930, with a sigil which is (among other things) unfortunately an ancient sigil for the earth:

CREATIVE INTELLECT Occ. A somewhat personal sigil, based on the common sigil for the element FIRE, is given by KOCH 1930:

CREATIVE POTENCY Occ. BLAVATSKY 1877 gives the sigil  to cover the idea of latent creativity, but see also CREATION, ONE and ORIGIN.

CROCUS Alc. The sigil is restricted to the substance used in the alchemical processes, and has no botanic implication.

BERTHELOT 1885 records a Greek sigil:

DIDEROT 1763

LUEDY 1928

SOMMERHOFF 1701 gives the following sigils for 'flowers of crocus', crocus aromaticus (See SAFFRON FLOWER):

CROSS Rel. Along with the related SWASTIKA, this is one of the oldest of sigils, almost universal in use and application. In her study of the ancient symbolic language, BLAVATSKY 1888 gives much space to the cross, which she sees as being derived from the union of male and female, Spirit and Matter, this meeting being 'the emblem of life eternal in spirit on its ascending arc, and in matter as the ever resurrecting element - by procreation and reproduction'. The spiritual male is the vertical line } whilst the differentiated matter-line is the horizontal: — The former is said to be invisible, the latter on the plane of objective perception. BLAVATSKY 1888 gives also the sigil  as the 'astronomical cross of Egypt', but the Tau-Cross which is reversed and encircled is discussed in its esoteric connexion with the crucifixion of CHRIST, for a simple version of this sigil is the Rose Cross:

A large number of variant sigils is recorded in occult sources, in addition to the standard forms listed by traditional names below. For example, a tree-cross given by VERARDI 1972 is said to unite the three worlds of the Celestial, Terrestrial and Infernal:  TESTA 1972 reproduces many early Christian cross sigils, among which are the axe-cross, tau-cross and the curious hampt-cross, all of which are listed below. TESTA 1962 also reproduces the various cross-forms given in the famous Poem XIX by Paulinus of Nola, of which the following are out of the ordinary:

The following alphabetical list of cross-names does not give sources simply because they are so common: they have all at one time or another appeared in occult sources.

CUPELLA Alc. SOMMERHOFF 1701 gives the sigils T P X X O for cupella, 'the container in which separation of the impure from the pure metals takes place'.

The sigil given by SIGNA 17C is probably intended to symbolise the wooden cask or cupula: T° (but see CUPELLATION)

SIGNA 17C gives sigils for cupellare, which probably refer to the idea of 'casking in a wooden tub': P R L Z

CUPELLATION Alc. BERTHELOT 1885 records two Greek variants, both short-forms for the Greek word used to designate the process of testing or assaying or refining (precious) metals in a cupel: J J

DAIMON Ast. The Greek word daimon is confused in many contexts with the modern 'demon', which is unfortunate, since only the Greek kakadaemon works evil, and the Greek referred to an altogether higher intelligence. In the astrological system of the ancient Greeks, the daimon (more exactly, the klipos daimonos, 'the part of the daimon') was that degree of the zodiac in mirror-image, relative to the Ascendant, of the pars fortunae, for which a sigil is recorded in OMONT 1894:  The Greek sigil recorded under the name daimon by BERTHELOT 1885 may not be related to this astrological pars:  NEUGEBAUER 1959 records an early Graeco-Byzantine variant:

DALETH Occ. The fourth letter of the Hebrew alphabet (see HEBRAIC SCRIPT), for which many derivatives are given within the tradition of secret alphabets, notably the series recorded by BARTOLOZZI 1675:  WIRTH 1927 equates daleth with the Tarot arcanum the EMPEROR, and in his treatment of the graphic etymology from the vestigial drawing of the Egyptian hieroglyphic traces the form of the letter to the idea of door:

DARKNESS Occ. Sigil derived by WELLING 1735, probably from the alchemical form for NIGHT, to symbolise the setting free of the subterranean destructive forces of darkness:  OLIVER 1828 gives the sigil as a symbol of the profound secrecy or 'darkness' under which the initiates were placed, the form being a vestigial drawing of the Masonic trowel:

 CHASSANT 1884 records a mediaeval abbreviation (for dies):
 KOCH 1930 gives the sigil  for the rune Day.

SOMMERHOFF 1701 gives a series of sigils, most of them recorded by GESSMANN 1906 above, but notes that 'among alchemists (Medicos) not only the time of sunlight, but the nighttime itself makes up a day - a Dies Naturalis'. Within such a framework, the sigils given under DAY AND NIGHT are also relevant to the idea of 'day'.

DEATH Occ. Usually a vestigial drawing of a 'death's head' is used as a sigil or symbol for 'death', but a number of sigils have been derived from the Greek Thanatos - from the capital letter Theta - as for example in SMITH 16C, within an astrological context:
 CHASSANT 1884 records:

BOCK 1931 gives the uncommon form:

The CAPUT MORTUUM of alchemy is the 'reject' residue left after the alchemical process has been completed.

DEATH ARCANUM Occ. WIRTH 1927 relates this 13th arcanum of the Tarot pack to the Hebraic MEM, and associates with it the sigil  which he claims to be derived from the primitive form for mem - though, of course, the connexion with 'water' expressed in the Egyptian hieroglyph as a vestigial drawing (see JENSEN 1970), and the connexion with the sigil for SCORPIO, are also relevant. WIRTE 1927 relates the card to the sigil for SATURN  presumably because the form may be traced in the structure of the design, and because this planet is exoterically linked with the idea of death.

DEATH'S HEAD See CAPUT MORTUUM

DECAD See SENARY

DECADE Occ. In her complex numerological study BLAVATSKY 1888 gives a sigil for the decade which is linked with the ten of the Sephirothic tree, the 'celestial fruits, the ten or  10 born out of the two invisible male and female seeds making up the 12, or the Dodecahedron of the Universe'.

DECILE Ast. A sigil (abbreviation) is given by SIMMONITE 1890

DEGREE Alc. An abbreviation of the Latin gradus recorded by GESSMANN 1906, is not intended to represent the degree of astrology:

DEITY Occ. Sigil recorded by BLAVATSKY 1888 to record 'unity within zero':  the symbol of Deity, the Universe and Man, linked with the DECADE.

DEMON See DAIMON

DEMONS Occ. Usually the sigils preserved in the occult tradition are designed to represent individual demons, listed in this Dictionary by the most common names, but KIRCHER 1655 gives a sigil which appears to refer to demons as a class: ER DESCENDANT Ast. A sigil is given by NEUGEBAUER 1959 for the Western horizon of the horoscope, from the Greek Dysis:

DESCENDING NODE Ast. The following sigil is copied from the Greek text given by OMONT 1894:  It is said to be the katababazon or oura, the equivalent of the modern CAUDA, but this sigil is quite probably a mistake, the correct form being given in the same manuscript for anabibazon or kephali:  See NODE.

DESCENDING SALVATION Occ. Sigil given by KOCH 1930 in his highly personalised rationale of symbolism:

DEVIL Occ. The most common sigil for this Gentleman is the inverted pentacle, said to represent the goat physiognomy as a vestigial drawing:

OLIVER 1826 gives a curious sigil as 'ancient Egyptian':
But see also DEVIL ARCANUM and KALI YUGA.

DEVIL ARCANUM Occ. WIRTH 1927 relates this 15th arcanum of the Tarot pack to the Hebraic SAMEK, and accords it the sigillic associations of the reversed pentagram (see DEVIL above)  and what he terms the 'primitive Samek', which he gives as  which is in fact (see JENSEN 1970) the Old Phoenician form, and may have been derived from a vestigial drawing of a fish. WIRTH 1927 associates the card with Auriga.

DIAPHORETICS Alc. SOMMERHOFF 1701 records a series of late-mediaeval sigils for the metals and minerals of diaphoretic agency, which in each case is constructed from the most common sigillic form:

DIDO Ast. Hypothetic planet claimed by WEMYSS 1927 to be the ruler of the zodiacal Virgo, for which he gives the sigil: ① DIGEST Alc. The term is applicable only to the alchemical process, and not to the human.

VALENTINE 1671 DIDEROT 1763  POISSON 1891 SCHNEIDER 1962    ALBERTUS 1974 SOMMERHOFF 1701 gives for digestio and digere the forms     two of which were wrongly copied by GESSMANN1906:

DIGESTION Alc. MICHAELSPACHER 1616 gives the sigil  next to the sign or constellation Leo, perhaps to symbolise the alchemical process of Digestion.

DIN Mag. Sigil given by HEYDON 1664 for a spirit (perhaps Dina) and used to represent the letter D in the secret writing called 'Alphabet of Angels and Genii':

DIONYSOS See BACCHUS.

DISORDERED INTELLECT Occ. Sigil given by (perhaps originated by) KOCH 1930:

DISSOLUTION Alc. A mediaeval sigil is given by DIDEROT 1763:

MICHAELSPACHER 1616 gives the sigil  next to the sign or constellation Cancer, perhaps intending to symbolise the alchemical process of dissolution associated with this zodiacal sign.

GEHEIME 1785 gives a sigil for the alchemical process, which he contrasts with the sigil for COAGULATION, thus:

DYNAMIS Ast. SUCHER 1975 appears to link the sigil for Taurus  with the SPHERE of the Dynamis, which is traditionally (in terms of the Pseudo-Dionysian hierarchies) associated with the SPHERE OF MARS.

E

EAGLE Ast. A highly personal (and modern) sigil for the zodiacal sign or constellation SCORPIO is given by SUCHER 1975:  The author claims that the sign for the Eagle used in ancient times to stand in place of Scorpio, an esoteric idea for which the symbolic form is the Eagle of St John (see FOUR EVANGELISTS), the esoteric sigil that for Scorpio. But see also SIGIL 1978.

EARTH Occ. BERTHELOT 1885 records an ancient Greek sigil:  Since this form is contrasted with that for HEAVEN (Ouranos), it is clear that it refers to the globe of the earth, rather than to the alchemical element. The majority of the following sigils were intended to denote the mystical 'third element', which is neither the globe of the Earth, nor the 'earth dust'. In an astrological context it might refer to the EARTH TRIPLICITY which is manifest in the macrocosm as the zodiacal Taurus, Virgo and Capricorn, in the microcosm as the melancholic temperament. In its alchemical sense, a sigil would refer only to the 'third element'.

A sigil given by WELLING 1735 represents the Spiritual and Invisible Earth, the occult Earth which existed before the descent of Lucifer:

OLIVER 1826 gives as 'an ancient Egyptian symbol' for the element Earth the sigil:

BLAVATSKY 1888 gives a series of three sigils for which she maintains both an exoteric and esoteric meaning: in each case the exoteric meaning is the globe of Earth. The sigil represents the 'first ideal World, self generating and self-impregnating', and hence a fitting symbol for the Third Race, better known as the Lemurian. The sigil represents the 'unity of the spiritual world' contrasting with the duality of the 'material', a sigil which symbolises the Earth state when the male-female polarity developed, and hence a fitting sigil for the Fourth Race, commonly termed the Atlantean. The sigil  esoterically represents the condition of the earth fallen into generation, or into the production of its species through sexual union: this last sigil was noted by BLAVATSKY 1877 as intended for the physical Earth (the globe), and is commonly used in this sense nowadays, as for example in SUCHER 1970, where it is used as the centre of the geocentric charts, to distinguish them from heliocentric diagrams: however EPHEMERIDES 1766 uses  HALL 1959 gives the sigil  for both the physical Earth and for ANTIMONY. See also THREE EARTHS and EARTH TRIPLICITY.

EARTH HAND Pal. Sigil used in modern chiromancy to denote the male Earth hand, sometimes called the Practical hand form, recorded in GETTINGS 1965:  This source gives also the sigil for the female Earth hand, which is confused with that for the male:

EARTH TRIPLICITY Ast. Sigil recorded (perhaps originated) by AGRIPPA 1510, but rarely found later, since the elemental natures of the zodiacal signs Taurus, Virgo and Capricorn (here encapsulated into one sigil) are more usually symbolised under one or other of the sigillic forms for EARTH:

ELEMENTAL WORLD Occ. KIRCHER 1655

ELEMENTS Occ. The elements of occultism have virtually nothing to do with the elements of modern science, and must not be confused with these. The ancient occult elements are exoterically four: AIR, EARTH, FIRE and WATER, with an esoteric 'fifth' element, usually termed the QUINTESSENCE, all of which are well provided for, so far as sigils go. As a group of four or five, they are symbolised in a variety of ways, the most common early sigil being that given by SHELTON 17C:  and (the so-called SEAL OF SOLOMON) given by SOMMERHOFF 1701  which is in fact the graphic origin of the four most common sigils for the FOUR ELEMENTS, in the order listed above:

A sigil given by GABELLA 1615 is explained as representing the four elements in union  providing a basic unit which (along with the sigils for Sun, Moon and Aries - see the MONAD of Dee) was supposed in the Rosicrucian stream to form the ancient underlying structural base of the planetary sigils. DEE 1564 also gives the cross  which he terms, among other things, CHAOS, and links it with the sigils for MORTAL ADAM and IMMORTAL ADAM in his esoteric Christian symbolism. This element sigil he calls 'middle', presumably because it is caught between the solar and lunar forces, and in connexion with the Christos he terms it 'Sacrifice on the cross'.

Whilst SOMMERHOFF 1701 gives the standard list of sigils for the four elements (listing a printer's error for Air  which has been perpetuated by later copyists as the genuine sigil), he lists four sigils which are intended to represent the idea of the four elements as a unity:     GESSMANN 1906 expands on these with at least one bad copy:

SOMMERHOFF 1701, under his section on the Elementa or Principia, also gives sigils for the five elements which he lists - Spirit  Salt   Sulphur  Water  Earth  of which the last two (in accordance with an Aristotelian classification) are said to be passive, the others active. He says, quite rightly, that other authorities list only three elements, though these are the elemental principles of Salt \ominus Sulphur \triangle Mercury γ

EMETIC TARTAR Alc. GESSMANN 1906

EMETIC WINE Alc. GESSMANN 1906

EMPEROR Occ. WIRTH 1927 relates this 4th arcanum of the Tarot pack to the Hebraic DALETH (see HEBRAIC SCRIPT), and accords it the sigillic form \triangle delta, also the fourth letter of the Greek alphabet, which he says should represent for the Emperor the triangle with the eye in the centre, the so-called 'eye of Providence':  WIRTH 1927 also associates this card with the sigil for SULPHUR \triangle the form for which may be traced in the composition of the traditional design.

EMPRESS Occ. WIRTH 1927 relates this 3rd arcanum of the Tarot pack to the Hebraic GIMEL (see HEBRAIC SCRIPT), and accords it the sigil of the so-called 'receptive triangle' \lrcorner as well as the 'set square' \lrcorner a form derived from the gamma, the third letter of the Greek alphabet. WIRTH 1927 associates the card with the zodiacal VIRGIN, and accords it the standard sigil:

ENOUGH Alc. Abbreviation which may be taken as a sigil, derived from the Latin quantum satis, given in ALCHEMICAL 17C:

EOH Occ. Sigil given by KOCH 1930 as rune for horse:

EQUAL Alc. All the variant sigils recorded by GESSMANN 1906 are presumably abbreviations of the late Latin ana, 'equal in quantity':

EQUINOX Occ. A basic sigil from the Rosicrucian stream of symbolism, recorded by GABELLA 1615:  This sigil is derived from the common form for ARIES () by John Dee for his MONAD, and is linked with the meeting at a single point of the Sun and Moon, as well as with the concept of equal hours of day and night. It is in a similar spirit of symbolising that DEE 1564 gives  as the symbol for FIRE, as derived from the first point of Aries, the equinoctial point. BLAVATSKY 1888 gives the sigil  as 'the two equinoxes and the two solstices placed within the figure of the earth's path'.

ESSENCE Occ. SOMMERHOFF 1701 gives for essentia:
 KOCH 1930 gives a dot as sigil, presumably derived from his personal interpretation of the graphic etymology of the sigil he calls EYE OF GOD:  In the sequence of sigils described by BLAVATSKY 1888, the first sigil represents the undifferentiated spirit, 'the one infinite and unknown Essence' which 'exists from all eternity':
 This sigil is the first in a series of stages relating to the idea of material MANIFESTATION.
 See also QUINTESSENCE and UNITY.

ESSENCE OF TARTAR Alc. Several mediaeval sigils for the salt are given by GESSMANN 1906:

ESSENTIAL OIL See ESSENCE.

ESSENTIA QUINTA See QUINTESSENCE.

ETERNAL DARK Occ. Sigil given by BOEHMEN 1635 to represent the 'kingdom of darkness dwelling in itself and the 'eternal nature in the anger':  As a sigil it is a component of the ETERNAL LIGHT.

ETERNAL LIGHT Occ. Sigil given by BOEHMEN 1635 to represent the 'Spirit in the essence', the flash (also symbolised by the sigil for the SUN).
 The sigil is 'eternity and time, God in love and anger, moreover heaven and hell':  As a sigil it is a composite of the ETERNAL DARK and the SALNITER.

ETERNITY Occ. In her basic sigil components used in astrology HONE 1951 gives the sigil  to represent the 'never ending' and 'spirit or primal power' (though this term has nothing to do with the Archai of the Dionysian system of hierarchies). KOCH 1930 gives (somewhat imaginatively) a sigil for eternity:

ETHERIC Occ. SCHEFFERS 1775 gives a sigil  for Aether, which may in fact be related to the Newtonian concept, rather than to the occultist.
 A sigil given by GEHEIME 1785 is perhaps intended for the equivalent of the Paracelsian ens veneni:  However, see also VEGETABILIA.
 A sigil form given by AYMES 1975, representative of the meeting of the 'solar' and 'lunar' forces (the etheric and astral respectively), may be the rosicrucian symbol which is the basis for the modern rival of the form as for example in MERCURY 1977: these may be traced to a sigildiagram in STEINER 1923:  BERGMANN 1785 gives  for Aether.
 See also the reference to the idea of sigils for the etheric in the Introduction to this DICTIONARY, on page 13.
 See AKASHYA, CELESTIAL VAPOUR and QUINTESENCE.

ETRUSCAN SCRIPT Occ. One of the secret alphabets recorded within the occult tradition (see SECRET SCRIPTS), under a variety of different names and letter-orders. One of these alphabets, preserved by VIGNERE 1586 (see next page), illustrates in an interesting way the derivation of the so-called secret scripts from historic alphabets, for the distinguishing letter for the f sound of the Etruscan historic alphabet has the forms (recorded by JENSEN 1970):  which are continued in the secret Etruscan alphabet. It is accordingly interesting to compare the alphabet given by VIGNERE 1586 (first below) with a regular historic form (and variations) recorded by JENSEN 1970 for non-occult purposes (second group below).

a	b	c	d	e	f	g	h	i	j	k	l	m	n

a	b	c	d	e	f	g	h	i	j	k	l	m	n
o	p	q	r	s	t	u	v	w	x	y	z	th	š

In other respects this so-called 'Etruscan' of the occult tradition closely resembles the historic Faliscan, and is close in many of its letter-forms to the so-called NOACHITE SCRIPT.

EUCCHARIST Occ. Several variant forms are given by BOCK 1931, as used by the early Christians:

EVANGELISTS See FOUR EVANGELISTS

EVENING Alc. KOCH 1930 gives a modern sigil which is (presumably) a graphic rationalisation for 'the setting sun':

EVOLUTION Occ. In her complex numerological study, BLAVATSKY 1888 gives the sigil  as a symbol of the 'evolution and fall into generation or matter'. But see also EARTH

EXALTATION Alc. The sigil given by ALCHEMY 1650 is for the alchemical process, and has nothing to do with the astrological doctrines concerning the exaltation of planets:

EXHALATION Occ. KIRCHER 1655

EXPECTANT SOUL Occ. KOCH 1930 gives a modern sigil:

EXTRACT OF GOLD Alc. CARRICHTERUS 18C

EXUSIAI Ast. SUCHER 1975 appears to link the sigil for Gemini  with the Sphere of the Exusiai, which is traditionally associated with the SPHERE OF THE SUN.

EYE Occ. BERTHELOT 1885 records an ancient Greek form, and a variant from the alchemical tradition:

EYE OF ETERNITY Occ. Name and sigil given in Boehme's graphic system as recorded by LAW 1772, representing that 'which cannot be portrayed' in a figure which 'comprehends all whatever God and Eternity is':
 This sigil is derived from the union of LIGHT, WRATH and the ELEMENTS.

FEMALE Occ. The most common sigil is that adopted from the mediaeval traditional forms for VENUS:  and this has been taken into the modern canon; however, GEHEIME 1785 gives:

FERMENTATION Alc. LUEDY 1928

FIRE Occ. The majority of the following sigils were originally intended to denote the 'principal and spiritual' of the four elements, sometimes called the 'heavenly', rather than to refer to the incandescent gases which we nowadays call 'fire'.

For example, SOMMERHOFF 1701 notes that fire is 'the efficient cause, adeoque influens in effectum' and provides the following sigils:

BERTHELOT 1885 records the sigil  for fire from the ancient Greek alchemical tradition, but this sigil applies equally to the 'fire' planet MARS.

DEE 1564 gives the sigil  for alchemical fire though it is evident from the text that he has in mind that the sigil also represents the elemental fire (see MONAD) which sigil he calls the 'the mystical sigil of Aries': his disciple GABELLA 1615 appears to have linked it in a variant form with the elemental fire:

WELLING 1735 gives a sigil linked with the ancient form derived from the SEAL OF SOLOMON  which he says is the 'Spiritual and Invisible Fire', that occult Fire which existed before the descent of Lucifer. OLIVER 1826 gives  as an 'ancient Egyptian' sigil for elemental Fire. On a more material plane, SIGNA 17C records the sigil  for carbon fire, which relates to GRADES OF FIRE. FIRE BAPTISM See THREE BAPTISMS.

FIRE HAND Pal. In modern chiromancy, a sigil used to denote the male Fire hand type, sometimes called the Intuitive hand form, given by GETTINGS 1965:
The female hand type is given the related sigil:

FIRE PROOF Alc. Sigil recorded by GESSMANN 1906:

FIXATION Alc. MICHAELSPACHER 1616 gives the sigil  next to the sign or constellation Gemini, perhaps to symbolise the alchemical process of fixation, though the sigil is a variant for ORPIMENT. SCHNEIDER 1962 gives the sigils for fixatio:

FIXED SAL ALKALI Alc. GEOFFROY 1718
DIDEROT 1763

FIXED STAR Ast. From early mediaeval times the fixed star has been symbolised by means of a cross or by a circle (for example, see the manuscript MANSIONES 14C), though KIRCHER 1655 gives the sigil  and SYSTEMES 18C gives:
When such a sigil is confined to the horoscope figure, the star is generally intended to indicate the influence of a particular fixed star, which is usually named within the horoscope (for example, see IBN EZRA 1485).

A common variant is  often used to distinguish the sigil from that used for the SEXTILE aspect, which also is found in horoscope charts. In an example from PEARCE 1893, in the horoscope for King George V, the sigil precedes the name Aldebaran - however, in a manuscript copy of this figure, the star sigil is changed to a small square  which symbolises the star. This form is however very rare, and appears to be restricted to the USA. The following fixed stars have been accorded individual sigils in the astrological tradition: ALDEBARAN, Algol (CAPUT ALGOL), Algorab (ALA CORVI), ALPHECCA, Antares (COR SCORPIONIS), Arcturus (ALTAMECH), CAPELLA, Deneb Algebi (CAUDA CAPRICORNI), PLEIADES, Polaris (CAUDA URSAE), Procyon (CANIS MINOR), REGULUS (see also COR LEONIS), Sirius (CANIS MAJOR), SPICA, Vega (VULTUR CADENS). In his study of Rosicrucian symbols, CABELLA 1615 gives the sigil  whilst dealing with stars, but the form itself is ambiguous within the text.

FOOL ARCANUM Occ. WIRTH 1927 relates this last card (technically given the zero, or unnumbered, but generally held to be the 22nd and final card in the series) of the Tarot pack to the Hebrew TAU, and accords it the sigil  which alchemically is related to ALUM, and of course recalls the zero of our own numeration: the implication within this choice of sigil is that the 'fool' should be seeking to make the zero into a SUN sigil:

FORM Ast. LEO 1914 gives the sigil  which represents 'all definiteness of form or limitation, such as birth, life periods of varying lengths, death or change of form and the moulding of forms that are coming into manifestation'. It is very likely that LEO 1914 was regarding the sigil as a representation of the basic horoscope figure. LEO 1914 also gives the ordinary sigil for the MOON ☾ to symbolise 'the most subtle form of matter'.

FORTUNA MAJOR Geo. Sigil for one of the sixteen geomantic figures ☿. Fortuna (as it is often called) is linked by AGRIPPA 1531 with the element Earth, the 'planet' Sun, and the zodiacal sign Aquarius. A multitude of variants (stars, dots, floral devices, etc.) are used to denote the same four-fold structure. The following sigils are derived from the late mediaeval tradition, and are sometimes used to denote the Sun, as for example in TRITHEMIUS 1503.

AGRIPPA 1531

FORTUNA MINOR Geo. Sigil for one of the sixteen geomantic figures ☿. A multitude of variants (stars, dots, floral devices, etc.) is used to denote the same four-fold arrangement. Fortuna Minor is linked by AGRIPPA 1531 with the element of Fire, the 'planet' Sun, and the zodiacal sign Taurus. The following sigils are derived from the late mediaeval tradition, and are sometimes used to denote the Sun, as for example in TRITHEMIUS 1503.

FOUNTAIN WATER Alc. SIGNA 17C

FOUR ELEMENTS Occ. In the graphic system of WELLING 1735 the sigil relating to the so-called SEAL OF SOLOMON is used to denote the four elements, and explained as a form containing the golden ball of the Schamayin:

DEE 1564 gives the simple cross  and the exploded cross  to symbolise the four elements.

OLIVER 1826 gives  as an 'ancient Egyptian' symbol.

FOUR EVANGELISTS Rel. The Evangelists are most frequently symbolised individually in terms of astrological associations.

SAINT MATTHEW is linked with the winged human of AQUARIUS:

SAINT MARK is linked with the lion of LEO:

SAINT LUKE is linked with the bull of TAURUS:

SAINT JOHN is linked with the eagle (redeemed sign) of SCORPIO:

In theory any of the sigils listed for these four fixed zodiacal signs may be used to symbolise the Evangelists - see GETTINGS 1978. As AGRIPPA 1531 listed wrongly (though without sigils) the relationships between the elements and the signs, the correspondencies have been wrongly copied ever since - for example, WIRTH 1931 associates Luke with TAURUS  and EARTH, Mark with LEO  and FIRE, but John with SCORPIO  and AIR, though zodiacal Scorpio is actually a Water sign. In turn, WIRTH 1931 also associates Matthew with AQUARIUS  and with WATER, though the latter sign is actually an Air sign, in spite of its name.

KOCH 1930 adapts two Christian sigils specifically for the four Evangelists:

FULL MOON Ast. Three ancient forms are recorded by OMONT 1894  and NEUGEBAUER 1959  It is clear that in the horoscopes the last two sigils (at least) are intended to denote the most recent full moon to the birthtime recorded in the figure. SMITH 16C gives a related sigil, which appears to apply to the most recent conjunction as well as the opposition noted above:

The most common modern sigil for the zodiacal sign of the 'Twins', also used indiscriminately for the constellation of the same name, is given by HYGINUS 1482, derived ultimately from the ancient manuscript tradition (see NEUGEBAUER 1959 below):  The sigil is said by AGRIPPA 1510 to be based on the idea of 'embracing', though most modern explanations are based on the idea of communication.

GEOMANTIC SIGILS Geo. GIMEL Occ. The third letter of the Hebrew alphabet for which very many variants and derivative forms are given within the tradition of secret alphabets (see HEBRAIC SCRIPT), notably those collected by BARTOLOZZI 1675:  WIRTH 1927 equates gimel with the Tarot arcana of the EMPRESS, and thus with the zodiacal Virgo. WIRTH 1927 traces the graphic etymology of the Hebrew form from vestigial drawings relating to early alphabets  and links the form with the idea of 'camel', though the historical connexion with the Egyptian hieroglyphic pictorial form would suggest the idea of 'officialdom' (see JENSEN 1970).

GOLD Alc. Since in the alchemical and astrological tradition gold is synonymous with SUN, all the sigils used for this 'planet' may be used to denote the metal, and indeed may denote both at the same time. The following sigils are specifically given for gold, but as the sigils given under the entry for SUN indicate, they and related variants are used for the solar body.

GRADE Alc. GESSMANN 1906 records mediaeval abbreviations and sigils restricted to the verbal use:

GRADES OF FIRE Alc. There are four different grades, each linked to the four elements, for which ALCHEMY 1650 gives the following sigils:

AIR

WATER

These are usually termed (respectively), the aerial, cineris, igne aperto and balneum mariae.

SOMMERHOFF 1701 gives the following sigils for the four grades:

SHELTON 1701 gives a simple series     while GESSMANN 1906 records a (mediaeval) sigil which stands for the general idea of 'grades of fire':  This last sigil may be adapted in various combinations with the standard sigils of the elements, so that for example  may be used to indicate igne aperto.

LUEDY 1928 records the sigils for the four grades in a simple progression:

SOMMERHOFF 1701 lists other systems, one of 8 and one of 9 grades, but provides no related sigils.

GRATE Alc. Mediaeval sigil recorded by GESSMANN 1906 and apparently restricted to verbal use:

GRAVEL BATH Alc. GESSMANN 1906 gives several mediaeval variants based apparently on the idea of arena, or sand:

GREATER WORLD Occ. WELLING 1735 reinterprets the modern sigil for the SUN as an image of the lesser world (the point, which represents the human being), standing within the ambient of the Greater World (the circle which represents the Macrocosm), deriving  from . To some extent he is following the symbolic forms of DEE 1564, as set out in his study of the MONAD, but WELLING 1735 reasons that the inner nature of man is potential gold (the sigil for the Sun is also of course the sigil for GOLD), and is eternal and indestructible. DEE 1564 gives the sigil, later called the circulus simplex in the Rosicrucian literature, to represent the Macrocosm and as one of the three basic forms which link the invisible and celestial spiritual world (that is, the Greater World) with the visible world, the open product of Nature:

HAMALIEL Mag. BRAHE 1582 gives several sigils, all mediaeval in origin, for the angel associated with the zodiacal Virgo:  Within the geomantic tradition, HEYDON 1664 gives the sigil  for Hamaliel as the genius of CONJUNCTIO, but AGRIPPA 1531 gives this as the sigil for the ruling spirit of zodiacal Virgo. See SPIRIT OF VIRGO.

HANAEI Mag. BRAHE 1582 gives several sigils, all mediaeval in origin, for the angel associated with zodiacal Capricorn:  Within the geomantic tradition HEYDON 1664 gives the sigil  for Hanaei as the genius of CARCER, but this is almost certainly a confusion with the Hebrew letter recorded by AGRIPPA 1531 in this context. See SPIRIT OF CAPRICORN.

HAND Pal. The classification of lines and areas of the hand in the chiromantic tradition is related mainly to the use of astrological symbolism - for example, AGRIPPA 1531 gives the following sigils:  (Jupiter) for index;  (Saturn) for middle finger;  (Sun) for ring finger;  (Mercury) for little finger;  (Venus) for the ball of the thumb;  (Moon) for hypothenar eminence;  (Mars) for central palm. The chirognomic tradition incorporates similar astrological sigils, but see also AIR HAND, EARTH HAND, FIRE HAND, WATER HAND and TEMPERAMENTS.

HANFUL Alc. Sigil given by GESSMANN 1906 is probably an abbreviation of the Latin manipulus:  a measure sometimes wrongly confused with the FUGILLUM.

HANGING MAN Occ. WIRTH 1927 relates this 12th card of the Tarot arcana to the Hebrew LAMED, and accords it the sigil  which is the symbol of the 'completion of the Great Work (of alchemical transmutation)', presumably because this sigillic form may be traced within the structure of the card (this being a reversal of the structure within the WORLD ARCANUM).

HARDNESS See ADAMAS

HARTSHORN Alc. The sigil given by GESSMANN 1906 is no doubt an abbreviation of the Latin cornus cervi: CC

ALBERTUS 1974

SOMMERHOFF 1701 gives for 'burned hartshorn' the forms:

while GESSMANN 1906 gives:

HASMODAI Mag. Sigil supposed by HEYDON 1664 to be a geomantic spirit, ruler of VIA and POPULUS, but the sigil appears to be a poor copy of that given by AGRIPPA 1531 as ruling spirit of the Moon. HEYDON 1664 gives  whilst AGRIPPA 1531 gives:

HASMODEL Mag. Sigil given for geomantic spirit by HEYDON 1664, genius of AMISSIO, but an identical sigil is given by AGRIPPA 1531 as ruling spirit of zodiacal Taurus:

HAURIENS PRIMUS Ast. The twenty-sixth mediaeval lunar mansion, called Al Fargh al Mukdim in the Arabic astrological tradition, a sigil for which is recorded in MANSIONES 14C:

A sigil designed for amuletic use, and associated with this mansion (called finis Aquarii), is given by ABANO 1303:

HAURIENS SECUNDUS Ast. The twenty-seventh of the mediaeval lunar mansions, called Al Fargh al Thani in the Arabic astrological tradition, a sigil for which is recorded in MANSIONES 14C:

HE Occ. The fifth letter of the Hebrew alphabet (see HEBRAIC SCRIPT), for which very many derivative forms have been given in the tradition of secret alphabets, notably those collected by BARTOLOZZI 1675

WIRTH 1927 equates He with the arcanum the POPE in the Tarot pack, and thus with zodiacal Aries.

His list of earlier alphabetic forms for the letter, all related to the proto-Hebraic,     he derives from the idea of 'window', though it is more likely that the vestigial drawings were originally derived from the Egyptian hieroglyphic with the pictorial value of 'a shout of jubilation' - see JENSEN 1970.

HEAT Alc. The following sigils are obviously derived from the main sigillic forms for FIRE, though heat is specified within the texts.

This alphabet does not diverge in any significant way from the orthodox 'square' Hebraic forms: the Roman orthography has been determined with reference to the general occultist literature, and a short entry for each of the 22 letters has been included in the entries. The 22 characters are, of course, derived ultimately from a deeply significant magical structure, relating both to sound values and to the ancient pictographic symbolism, and it is probably this which has contributed so much to the development of the secret and magical scripts associated in occultism with the language. The simplest intention underlying such scripts is that a sigil be derived from the Hebraic form to represent that letter, and to connote the charge of magical meaning implicit in the sound, pictographic form and its corresponding numerical value. A good example may be seen in one of the most famous of such secret alphabets, the celestial in the form preserved by AGRIPPA 1531:

א	ב	ג	ד	ה	ו	ז	ח	ט	י	כ	ל	מ	נ
ס	ע	פ	צ	ק	ר	ש	ת

However, the interpretation of such scripts is rendered especially difficult by the wide-spread Notarikon techniques used by both the cabbalists and the occultists, and by the prevalent use of Gematria and Temurah - all of which render interpretation a hazardous business. The synoptical 'magical' alphabet given by WIRTH 1927 in his study of Tarot symbolism is actually related to the historic Moabite:

א	ב	ג	ד	ה	ו	ז	ח	ט	י	כ	ל	מ	נ
ס	ע	פ	צ	ק	ר	ש	ת

This example should serve to remind us that very many of the so-called 'secret' scripts are merely alphabets taken over from historic sources for magical purposes. Thus, the historic Samaritan book script recorded by JENSEN 1970 (for non-occult purposes) clearly formed the basis for a number of secret scripts:

א	ב	ג	ד	ה	ו	ז	ח	ט	י	כ	ל	מ	נ
Ⲁ	ⲁ	Ⲃ	ⲃ	Ⲅ	ⲅ	Ⲇ	ⲇ	Ⲉ	ⲉ	Ⲋ	ⲋ	Ⲍ	ⲍ
Ⲏ	ⲏ	Ⲑ	ⲑ	Ⲓ	ⲓ	Ⲕ	ⲕ
ⲏ	Ⲑ	ⲑ	Ⲓ	ⲓ	Ⲕ	ⲕ	Ⲍ

In this connexion, see the entry under SAMARITAN SCRIPT - but a sample from POSTEL 1538, who records two variants, is a good example:

א	ב	ג	ד	ה	ו	ז	ח	ט	י	כ	ל	מ	נ
Ⲁ	ⲁ	Ⲃ	ⲃ	Ⲅ	ⲅ	Ⲇ	ⲇ	Ⲉ	ⲉ	Ⲋ	ⲋ	Ⲍ	ⲍ

In some cases such scripts were adapted from the Hebraic to the Roman or Greek alphabet (again for magical purposes), as for example in the alphabet recorded by VIGNERE 1586, which is called 'Phoenician' or 'Ionic', though only distantly related to originals of those names:

a	b	c	d	e	f	g	h	i	j	k	l	m	n

ⲏ	Ⲑ	ⲑ	Ⲓ	ⲓ	Ⲕ	ⲕ	Ⲍ

A glance at one or two of the characters in the so-called CELESTIAL SCRIPT recorded from mediaeval sources by AGRIPPA 1531 indicates something of the extent to which such scripts are derived from this Samaritan form. A whole series of alphabets has been more obviously derived - albeit imaginatively - from the variety of orthodox 'square' forms, as for example in two of those recorded by BARTOLOZZI 1675:

כ	ק	ל	ה	ה	ו	ז	ח	ט	י	כ	ל	מ	נ

ו	ז	ח	ט	י	כ	ל	מ

כ	ק	ל	ה	ה	ו	ז	ח	ט	י	כ	ל	מ	נ

ו	ז	ח	ט	י	כ	ל	מ			נ

A large number of related Hebraic scripts are recorded in such texts as SELENUS 1624 and TRITHEMIUS 1508, as in the sources already mentioned above. In this Dictionary the following Hebraic or Hebraic-derived secret scripts are recorded: ADAMIC, BABYLONIAN, CANANEAN, CHALDEAN, CELESTIAL, MALACHIM, SAMARITAN, SOLOMONIAN, SUPERCELESTIAL and TRANSITUS FLUVII. HECADOTH Mag. Sigil given for the spirit named by HEYDON 1664 (but probably the cabbalistic Hechaloth was intended) to represent the letter H in the secret writing called 'Alphabet of Angels and Genii':

HERMETIC SIGIL Occ. DEE 1564 gives a sigil which is described as 'a small vessel containing the mysteries' and which must be regarded as the equivalent of the sigil hermeticum:  The more complex sigil of the MONAD may also be taken as the hermetic sigil:
 SHELTON 17C gives the more frequent sigil:

LUEDY 1928

HERMETIC TETRAD Occ. In his imaginative treatment of Tarot symbolism, WIRTH 1927 gives the four sigils     as the Hermetic Tetrad, and treats each individually in terms of the symbolism involved in their forms. A fifth sigil is derived from the first - the crescent form of the Moon  and this participates with the  to give the sigil (for example)  which is the basic SAL ALKALI, representing the primordial substance 'subject to the transmutation of the Moon' and is of course related to the most frequent sigil for TAURUS, which zodiacal sign has a rapport with fertile earth. WIRTH 1927 further derives the sigil  from  by way of . Such derivations are entirely speculative, however, and bear no relation to the historic etymologies of such graphic forms. The first of the tetrad, the solar sigil  is related to zero at one extreme, to the Sun at the other (see for example FOOL ARCANUM), with the alchemical matter of ALUM in between: the sigil is said to be 'Male, Active, Fixed' and is associated with Osiris and Reason, and with all other astrological solar connotations. The derived lunar sigil  is said to be 'Female, Passive, Mobile', and associated with Isis and Imagination, and with related lunar connotations. The second of the tetrad, the cross  is related to the TAU and to the sphragis, and is thus essentially a symbol of life engaged in four-fold matter. Placed above a sign it is a symbol of achievement, as for example in the alchemical ANTIMONY  which is in esoteric alchemy a redemptive sign, the spirit of  disengaging itself from the working of the material plane. The cross below a sign, as for example in the most frequent sigil for Venus  is, according to the esoteric tradition, a symbol of 'redardation', representing the fall of spirit into matter. The sigil for VERDIGRIS  shows the integration of this life principle within matter (see CROSS), a sign of equilibrium and health. The third of the tetrad, the triangle  is presented as the basis for the structure of the four elements:  for Fire;  for Earth;  for Water, and  for Air. The fourth in this tetrad, the square,  is seen as a symbol of equilibrium, and represents a fall into the senses: from this he derives such sigils as the PHILOSOPHER'S STONE:  By similar graphic logic, WIRTH 1923 traces an 'etymology' and meaning for each of the sigils for the seven planets, and indeed for some of the alchemical and astrological sigils. This rationale also underlies certain of his speculations as to the inner meaning of the TAROT pack.

HERMIT Occ. WIRTH 1923 relates this 9th arcanum of the Tarot pack to the Hebraic TETH, and accords it the sigil  which is a square divided into nine smaller squares, from which is derived the sigils  and  the latter said to be the figure 9, along with the 'primitive Teth':

HERSCHEL Ast. One of the early sigils for this planet is given in SIBLY 1817  and was later said to be derived from the initial of the discoverer Herschel. LEO 1914 saw a related variant  as a symbol of the unity of the three basic sigillic forms of 'Will, Wisdom and Activity' (see URANUS), expressing a higher grade of Mercury, of which he regards Herschel as a higher octave.

STRAGGLING 1824

SHEPHERD 1971

Eventually re-named URANUS, the two names co-existed in astrological circles, and a large number of sigils, many of them personal to individual astrologers, has been developed.

HESTIA See VESTA

HETH Occ. The 8th letter of the Hebrew alphabet (see HEBRAIC SCRIPT), for which many derivative forms are given within the tradition of secret alphabets, notably those collected by BARTOLOZZI 1675:     WIRTH 1927 equates Heth with the Tarot arcana the JUDGEMENT, and thus with zodiacal Libra. In his study of the graphic etymology of the letter he gives the forms      which he associates with a pictographic 'hurdle', though as JENSEN 1970 suggests, the forms are probably derived from the Egyptian hieroglyphic with a pictorial value of 'lotus flower'.

HEXAGON Ast. Sigil derived from Greek manuscript by OMONT 1894  relating to the aspect of SEXTILE.

For the non-astrological form, see ELEMENTS, LOVERS ARCANUM, TERNARY and VAYU.

In its esoteric aspect, the hexagon is treated in depth by BLAVATSKY 1888, who terms it the hieroglyphic senary. She records that it is 'the symbol of the commingling of the philosophical three fires and the three waters, whence results the procreation of the elements of all things. The same idea is found in the Indian equilateral double triangle. For though it is called in that country the sign of Vishnu, yet in truth it is the symbol of the Triad (or the Trimurti). For, even in the exoteric rendering, the lower triangle  with the apex downward, is the symbol of Vishnu, the god of the moist principle of water ... whilst the triangle, with its apex upward,  is Siva, the Principle of Fire, symbolized by the triple flame in his hand.' BLAVATSKY 1888 makes the point that this sigil is wrongly called 'Solomon's Seal', and that it produces the Septenary and the Triad at one and the same time, as well as the Decad. 'For with a point in the middle or centre, thus  it is a sevenfold sign, its triangles denote number 3, the two triangles show the presence of the binary; the six points are the senary; and the central point, the unit; the quinary being traced by combination, as a compound of two triangles, the even number, and of three sides in each triangle, the first odd number.' She further argues that this is why Pythagoras and the ancients made the number six, the senary, a sacred number of Venus, since the union of the two sexes is required to develop the generative force - the 'spagyrisation of matter by triads' (quoting RAGON 1853).

HIEROGLYPHIC SENARY See HEXAGON

HIGHER MAN Occ. Sigil given by STEINER 1904 as representative of the higher trinity within man, as yet to be developed: the Spirit Self, Life Spirit and Spirit Man:
See also FOURFOLD MAN.

HIPPOCRATIC WINE Alc. GESSMANN 1906 gives two sigils, both derived from abbreviation:

HIRCUS Ast. Mediaeval sigil for the fixed star, now alpha Aurigae, given by AGRIPPA 1510, but wrongly copied from the mediaeval manuscript tradition (see ALAYOCH):  This error has been continued by later copyists, so that the wrongly copied form has been adopted within the astrological tradition, even though it is in fact indistinguishable from the sigil used for ALDEBARAN.

HISMAEL Mag. Sigil given for 'geomantic spirit' by HEYDON 1664, said to be ruler of AQUISITIO and LOETITIA, but sigil is given by AGRIPPA 1531 as ruling spirit of the planet Jupiter:
HEYDON 1664 gives a variant:

HOLY DEITY Occ. A highly personal sigil given in Boehme's graphic system, and constructed from a visual play with the German auge, 'eye' (AUge):  The U is presented as a V, and stands for desire: 'It is all things, and yet a nothing, it beholdeth itself, and yet finds nothing but an A, which is the Eye'. This play between the V and its reversal A gives several sigils, all of which represent the Eternal Beginning and the Eternal End - 'Thus the Abyss sees in itself and findeth itself':       See LAW 1772

HOMER'S GOLDEN CHAIN Occ. A series of sigils relating to the occult Aurea Catena Homeri or Annulus Platonius is listed by HOMER 1723, with variants in brackets from HOMER 1757:

	Chaos confusum ()
	Spiritus Mundi volatilis incorporeus
	Spiritus Mundi acidus corporeus
	Spiritus Mundi fixus alcalicus corporeus

IGNIS ROTAE Alc. VALENTINE 1671 gives the sigils   but this term is almost certainly synonymous with the REVERBERATING FIRE, the ignis reverberius or ignis circulatorius for which SOMMERHOFF 1701 gives the sigil (for both)  and the sigils   for the latter. SCHNEIDER 1962 gives the sigils   for the circulatorius. See also GRADES OF FIRE.

IMBIBITIO Alc. Sigil given in ALCHEMY 1650 for a process of distillation:

IMMORTAL ADAM Occ. A sigil probably originated by DEE 1564, but as a concept derived from the Christian esoteric tradition of symbolism relating to the significance of alpha and omega:  DEE 1564 links the sigil with the idea of 'the immortal Adam', 'End', 'After the Formation of the elements', 'Manifestation', etc., and in connexion with the Christos, with 'King of all ubiquitous'. See also MORTAL ADAM and ELEMENTS.

INCERATION Alc. MICHAELSPACHER 1616 gives the sigil  next to the sign or constellation Sagittarius, perhaps to symbolise the alchemical process of Inceration.

INFINITY Occ. A modern sigil given by CIRLOT 1962 to represent the 'universe, the All' 'Infinity':  In this modern system of occult graphics, the modern sigil for the SUN is representative of 'the centre of infinity; the emanation or first cause':
Some occultists see the exoteric sigil for infinity, the lemniscate still used in mathematics  as a union of the Sun and Moon, linked at the point of time and space: see GETTINGS 1973.

INFUSION Alc. Many of the mediaeval sigils given by GESSMANN 1906 are abbreviations for the Latin tingtura:

INQUISITORIAL SCRIPT Occ. A script preserved by VIGNERE 1586 and said - on no sure showing - to have been used especially by the Inquisition, though it appears to belong to the series of scripts which are within the occult tradition termed Carolingian. See SECRET SCRIPTS.

INTELLECT Occ. KOCH 1930 gives a highly personal sigil for 'intellect in action':

See also CREATIVE INTELLECT, DISORDERED INTELLECT and PASSIVE INTELLECT

INTELLIGENCIES Occ. Several variant sigils for each of the so-called 'planetary intelligencies' exist, and these may be examined in the entries under the names of spiritual beings nowadays called Archangels but in certain esoteric documents, as for example in TRITHEMIUS 1522, referred to as Intelligencies of the Spheres (see ANAEL, GABRIEL, MICHAEL, ORIPHIEL, RAPHAEL, SAMAEI and ZACHARIEL). Since the spheres were eventually associated with the planetary bodies, a large number of sigils attached to the Intelligencies were associated with the planets themselves. The following represent the most frequently used in the occult tradition:

INTELLIGENCE OF JUPITER:	AGRIPPA 1531		RAPHAEL 1879
INTELLIGENCE OF MARS:	AGRIPPA 1531		RAPHAEL 1879
INTELLIGENCE OF MERCURY:	AGRIPPA 1531		RAPHAEL 1879
INTELLIGENCE OF MOON:	AGRIPPA 1531		RAPHAEL 1879
INTELLIGENCE OF SATURN:	AGRIPPA 1531		RAPHAEL 1879
INTELLIGENCE OF SUN:	AGRIPPA 1531
INTELLIGENCE OF VENUS:	AGRIPPA 1531		RAPHAEL 1879

Needless to say, the term intelligencies has nothing to do with the word intelligence in its modern sense.

Certain of the PLANETARY SYMBOLS are probably related to the different series of intelligencies.

INVERTED FENTACLE See DEVIL

IRON Alc. In both alchemical and astrological contexts the word iron is interchangeable with MARS, so that any of the numerous sigils for this planet may also represent the metal. A few of such sigils are also recorded as relating to both 'iron and steel'. The following forms have been given specifically for the metal:

JASON Ast. Hypothetical planet claimed by WEMYSS 1927 to be ruler of zodiacal Sagittarius, and to be in orbit between Saturn and Uranus:

JASPER Alc. SIGNA 17C

JESUS Rel. TESTA 1962 records many of the ancient sigils for the name Jesus:

The same source shows also that the following sigils are derived from the early Christian gematric tradition (888 being the numerical value of the name Jesus):

TESTA 1962 also gives a number of sigils for Jesus Christ:

SCHEIBLE 1848 gives the sigil  for Jesus triumphant.
 See also CHRIST, CHRISTMON and CROSS.

JOD Occ. The 10th letter of the Hebraic alphabet (see HEBRAIC SCRIPT) for which many derivative forms have been given in the tradition of secret alphabets, notably those collected by BARTOLOZZI 1675:
 WIRTH 1927 equates Jod with the Tarot arcanum the WHEEL

OF FORTUNE. He gives the sigillic forms  as the prototypes of the letter, which he says is derived from a vestigial drawing of a hand, though the etymology is actually connected with a vestigial hieroglyphic of the god Seth, representative of Lower Egypt.

JUDGEMENT Occ. WIRTH 1927 relates this 8th arcanum of the Tarot pack to the Hebrew letter HETH, and accords it the sigil  a so-called primitive Heth which in point of fact only approximates to a letter from the Old Phoenician script  as given by JENSEN 1970. WIRTH 1927 also says that this figure approximates to our own number 8, for it was originally drawn:  This form does not appear in the development of the Hebraic scripts, though it is found in (for example) the ETRUSCAN SCRIPT. The confusion may have arisen from the variant for the phonetic h in the Sinai script:

JUGGLER Occ. WIRTH 1927 relates this first arcanum of the Tarot pack to the Hebraic ALEPH, and thus to the constellation Orion and zodiacal Taurus. He accords the card the sigil  and the point . drawn as the centre of the pupil in the Eye of God,  thus completing a cycle in the 22 arcana with the  of the last in the series, the FOOL ARCANUM.

JUNO Ast. Sigil given by WILSON 1819 for 'planet' (actually an asteroid) in orbit between Mars and Jupiter:
 WILSON 1819  KOCH 1930
 SHEPHERD 1971

JUPITER Ast. Modern sigil derived from the late mediaeval tradition, a printed example being HYGINUS 1482:  AGRIPPA 1531 traces its form to the sceptre, but this is imaginative, and as rare examples below indicate, there were many variants for which no such graphic etymology could be given. LEO 1914 says of Jupiter that it represents 'the semi-circle rising over the cross' and is 'the symbol of soul liberating itself from matter'.

KALI YUGA Occ. The sigil most usually linked with the DEVIL, supposedly as a vestigial drawing of the horns and goat-beard,  is said by BLAVATSKY 1888 to be the esoteric sigil for the Kali Yuga, the 'Dark Age', which according to certain esoteric circles began about 4,500 years ago. The sigil is 'the sign of human sorcery, with its two points (horns) turned heavenwards, a position every Occultist will recognize as one of the "left-hand", and used in Ceremonial Magic'.

KAPH Occ. The 11th letter of the Hebrew alphabet (see HEBRAIC SCRIPT) for which many derivative sigillic forms are recorded within the tradition of secret alphabets, notably those collected by BARTOLOZZI 1675:  WIRTH 1927 equates kaph with the Tarot STRENGTH ARCANUM, and thus with zodiacal Leo. In his record of the graphic etymology of the letter from the vestigial drawing, he traces a connexion with the idea of a palm, and there does indeed appear to be a link between the ancient forms and the heraldic plant of Upper Egypt, as indicated (in a non-occult context) by JENSEN 1970. WIRTH 1927 gives the forms

KEDEMEL Geo. Sigil given by HEYDON 1664 for one of the geomantic spirits:  This sigil is probably copied wrongly from AGRIPPA 1531, who gives a similar form for a spirit of Venus:

KEY See CLAVIS.

KINDLE Alc. Two mediaeval sigils recorded by SIGNA 17C:

KNE Mag. Sigil of a spirit (perhaps Kyniel) given by HEYDON 1664 to represent the letter K in the secret writing called 'The Alphabet of Angels and Genii':

KOPH Occ. The 19th letter of the Hebrew alphabet (see HEBRAIC SCRIPT) for which many derivative sigillic forms are recorded within the tradition of secret alphabets, notably those collected by BARTOLOZZI 1675:  WIRTH 1927 equates koph with the Tarot SUN ARCANUM and (not surprisingly in view of the iconography of the card) with the zodiacal Gemini, and gives the following forms as indicative of the line of development which the letter took among the early alphabets:  It would appear that the letter did in fact develop, as he suggests, from an Egyptian hieroglyphic with the pictorial value of 'head'.

KYRIOTETES Ast. SUCHER 1975 appears to link the sigil for Aries  with the Sphere of the Kyriotetes, otherwise known as the Dominions, the rulers of the Sphere of Jupiter.
See INTELLIGENCIES.

L

LADY POPE Occ. WIRTH 1927 relates this 2nd arcanum of the Tarot pack with the Hebraic letter BETH, and with the constellation Cassiopeia: he accords the card the sigils of the horizontal single line — and the black disc ● along with the binary || which relates to the columns behind the figure in the card.

LAHAD Mag. Sigil for spirit (perhaps derived from Lad, one of the names for the angel Metatron) given by HEYDON 1664 to represent the letter L in the secret writing called 'Alphabet of Angels and Genii':

LAMED Occ. The 12th letter of the Hebrew alphabet (see HEBRAIC SCRIPT) for which many derivative forms are given within the tradition of secret alphabets, as for example in those collected by BARTOLOZZI 1675:  WIRTH 1927 equates Lamed with the Tarot arcanum of the HANGING MAN. He gives the following forms as being derivative of the letter  and links the pictographic origin with the idea of 'a goad': however, it is likely that Lamed was derived from an Egyptian hieroglyphic with the pictorial value of 'horizon' (see JENSEN 1970).

LAMP Alc. DIDEROT 1763

LAPIS Alc. For the generic sigils, see STONE. SOMMERHOFF 1701 gives the sigils for a number of different stones, as follows: Silex

LEO Ast. Zodiacal sign of the 'Lion', the printed sigil being derived from the mediaeval manuscript tradition (see JANUA 14C below, for example), though ultimately from the Graeco-Byzantine tradition (see NEUGEBAUER 1959 below, for example), recorded in print by HYGINUS 1482: ♌ The sigil is said by AGRIPPA 1510 to be based on the shape of a lion's tail, though this is entirely fanciful, as many of the mediaeval variants would suggest (even AGRIPPA 1510 uses variant sigil forms). Two common misuses of the sigil lead to confusion, and are worth recording. Sometimes the form ♌ is given for Leo, though this sigil is in fact the NODE of a planet, especially the one called caput draconis. An example of this mistake may be seen in the glyph used in the medal for the American Numismatic Association designed by Vincze in WHITTICK 1971. Another common error is the reversal of the sigil - an example of which may be seen in SIBLY 1790, where it may to some extent be excusable in view of the reversal of the copper plate after engraving:

LIBRA Ast. Zodiacal sign of the 'Balance'. The printed version of the sigil is derived ultimately from the Egyptian (see STOBART 2C below) via the Graeco-Byzantine, as for example in HYGINUS 1482:

The sigil is said by AGRIPPA 1510 to be based on the form of a balance, but derivation from an Egyptian hieroglyph is more likely.

In her complex numerological study BLAVATSKY 1888 gives two sigils $|O = \textcircled{1}$ as the 'sacred Ten (numbers or Sephiroth)' which are the 'Light' - though this is the occult light - 'through which all things were made'. A sigil given by GABELLA 1615 in the graphic theory of occult symbolism derived ultimately from DEE 1564 is  which carries the implication that the Sun and the Moon face to face, in an image of the first day when light was created. This latter sigil also represents the 'philosopher's light'. A sigil given in LAW 1772 - as part of the study of Boehme's graphic occult system - is representative of half the nature of the created world:  the other half is the sigil for WRATH. This light sigil is derived from his 'One Globe':  But see in this connexion EYE OF ETERNITY. A sigil given for the expansive principle of Boehme's theosophy, which may be associated with the light polarity of the dualism which pervades his thought, is the simple  But see TERNARY. A sigil for light is derived by WELLING 1735 from the alchemical sigil for DAY, intended to symbolise the outpouring of spiritual forces on to the material plane:  LEO 1914 gives the sigil  for Light and Dark. It will be clear from the above notes that the Light of the occultists is not the 'light' of modern physicists. See the opposing sigils for DARK and WRATH, and also COSMOS.

A multitude of variants (dots, stars, floral devices, etc.) is used to denote the same fourfold arrangement. Loetitia is linked by AGRIPPA 1531 with the element of Air, the planet Jupiter, and the zodiacal sign Taurus. The following sigils, derived from late mediaeval sources, are sometimes used to denote the planet Jupiter, as for example in TRITHEMIUS 1503.

LOVE Occ. Sigil given by KOCH 1930 as a rune meaning 'love':
See RUNES

LOVERS ARCANUM Occ. WIRTH 1927 relates this 6th arcanum of the Tarot pack to the Hebraic VAU, and accords it (presumably because of the element of 'choice' which one may read into the iconography of the card) the sigil  the important Pythagorean sigil which according to WIRTH 1927 is related to the 'primitive Vau', and the hexagram which within the occult tradition is one of the symbols of union, as for example in the 'union of opposites' of the FOUR ELEMENTS.

LUCIFER Mag. SCHEIBLE 1848 gives the sigil  for the spirit, and the sigil  for Lucifer and Beelzebub. The name Lucifer is also associated with the morning rising of the planet Venus in traditional astrology, and in certain mediaeval manuscripts one finds the Sphere of Venus marked the Sphere of Lucifer, though the sigils employed refer only to the planet VENUS, and not to the Spirit Lucifer.

MALE Occ. GEHEIME 1785

MALE AND FEMALE Occ. A sigil given by MASSEY 1893 is intended to represent 'male and female united under other and more evident twin-types of the two sexes':

BLAVATSKY 1888 gives the form for 'Man as the cube unfolded':  and explains the form as the image of the 3 horizontal (female) and the 4 vertical (male) forming the image of Man 'as the culmination of the deity on Earth, whose body is the cross of flesh.'

BLAVATSKY 1888 gives also the sigil  which is derived from the Greek form  which means 'Moon', and which is also the symbol of the pillar and the circle (see for example the sigils for the LADY POPE). BLAVATSKY 1888 also gives sigils for the male as a vertical  the female as a horizontal  and the union in the CROSS. See also ORIGIN and YIN AND YANG

MALE ELEMENT Occ. Sigils given by KOCH 1930 in his highly personal system of symbolism:

MAN Occ. BERTHELOT 1885 gives the sigil  which is a derivation from the abbreviation for anthropos. In addition to the sigils and forms noted in MALE AND FEMALE, BLAVATSKY 1888 records the emergence of Man 'the body erect'  from the spiritual  to give the 'creative potency'  and the 'moving man'  This emergence of individuality from the spiritual gives rise to the Pythagorean sigil of the binary, representative of 'choice' or 'moral choice':

BLAVATSKY 1888 also gives for Deity, Universe and Man, the form:

MAN CRUCIFIED Occ. BLAVATSKY 1888 gives the decussated 'Cross in Space'  as an image of the Platonic symbol of 'the second God who impressed himself on the Universe in the form of the Cross' - but links the idea of the human crucifixion with ancient initiation rites. See CROSS MANIFESTATION Occ. BLAVATSKY 1888 gives a progressive series of sigils relating to the occult view of manifestation, the emergence of material life from the absolute spirit. Whilst the following sigils have been accorded individual entries, as indicated, the general outline of the graphic theory is as follows: from the ESSENCE  which represents the one unknown and unknowable infinite, emerges the sigil of manifestation, the first differentiation, which is sexless and infinite, or potential space within abstract space:  The sigil represents the spirit-principle, with its fructifying power unconcealed. A third stage is symbolized in the sigil for the MOTHER NATURE  which is the transformation of the point, the emergence of duality. This in turn becomes the sigil for the Mundane Cross, illustrative of the ORIGIN of human life, esoterically called the Third Root Race:  When the encompassing circle of spirit disappears, the sigil of the cross is left  representing the fall into MATTER as the final accomplishment, at which point the Fourth Race begins.

LEO 1914, influenced by BLAVATSKY 1888, gives the mundane cross  for manifestation, but reasons that 'the perpendicular beam represents SPIRIT, the horizontal bar the animal or earthly principle being penetrated by the Divine Spirit'.

MARS Ast. The modern sigil is derived from the Graeco-Byzantine astrological forms, through the mediaeval manuscript tradition - see NEUGEBAUER 1959 below. The printed example is from HYGINUS 1482:  AGRIPPA 1531 traces its form to the dart, but GABELLA 1615 follows DEE 1564 and gives a more complex version  claiming that it is derived from the FOUR ELEMENTS () the Sun () and the Moon (). LEO 1914 says that the sigil  is 'really the cross over the circle' and 'is the symbol of spirit constrained by matter'.

MATERIAL Occ. A series of modern sigils related to the idea of materiality (in contrast to the spiritual) has been given by CIRLOT 1962, in his personal theory of graphic symbolism: the sigils for the material and passive  and the material and active  combine as two opposing principles to induce the material generation:  CIRLOT 1962 also gives a material quaternary:  In the earlier tradition, the 'material' is generally represented by reference to the hyle or MATTER.

SHEPHERD 1971 records two mediaeval variants:

The astrological sigil is derived directly from the Graeco-Byzantine astrological tradition (see NEUGEBAUER 1959 below), a printed example being from HYGINUS 1482:  AGRIPPA 1531 traces its form to the caduceus, but a variant given by GABELLA 1615 is traced to a contraction of Sun and Moon over the cross of materiality, in the analytic method of DEE 1564, relating to the MONAD. LEO 1914 sums up the verbal tradition when he says that the sigil  'represents the complete union of the three symbols (☉ Will, ☾ Wisdom, and + Activity) in one, denoting perfectibility'.

MICHAEL Occ. Sigil derived from the mediaeval tradition by AGRIPPA

TRITHEMIUS 1503 appears to have made a mistake in giving the sigils for Michael, as these are the forms for ANAEL, for which the same source gives the sigil:
SCHEIBLE 1848 gives three sigils:

An occult sigil which is certainly mediaeval, and presumably derived from the cabbalistic tradition, may be given only as PERSONAL 1980 - but see Introduction:

MICROCOSMIC PENTAGON Occ. MINED GOLD Alc. DIDEROT 1763

MINERA Alc. SIGNA 17C  CARRICHTERUS 18C

MINERALIA Occ. Sigil given by HOMER 1723, referring to the various combinations of the four elements devoid of spiritual or animating forces of the astral or etheric nature:  but WIRTH 1931 gives  SOMMERHOFF 1701 gives under Mineralia 'those things which are neither Animal nor Vegetable', and provides a synopsis of general sigils as follows:

METALS: Sun:  Moon:  Jupiter:  Venus:  Saturn:
Mars:  METALLA IMPERFECTA: Antimonium:  Auripigmentum:
 Cinnabaris nativa:  Marcasita:  Sulphur:

Nitrum:  Alumen:  Borax:  Sal Gemmae:  Sal
Marinum:

MINERAL LEAD Alc. A Greek sigil is recorded by BERTHELOT 1885 from the alchemical tradition:

MINERAL SALT Alc. A vast collection of mediaeval sigils exists, of which the following are the most common:

ALCHEMY 1650

GESSMANN 1906

The alchemical Mercurius Saturni praecipitatus (see MERCURY OF LEAD) is probably minium.

MINUTE Alc. SHELTON 17C

MIST Alc. A sigil recorded by BERTHELOT 1885 from Greek alchemical manuscripts as meaning 'condensed vapour', is a short-form of the word Nephele:

MIX Alc. SOMMERHOFF 1701 gives the sigils   for commistio, and the sigil  for permixtio.
GESSMANN 1906

MOLIBDOCHALC Alc. BERTHELOT 1885 records two Greek sigils from the alchemical tradition:

MONAD Occ. Sigil given by DEE 1564 in his mystical theory of graphic forms:  The composition of the sigil is complex, but may be resolved to a union of Sun  Moon  and four elements  supported by Alchemical Fire  a sigil related to the form used for ARIES. The complete sigil is usually called the Hieroglyphic Monad, and its form - as well as the underlying theory of its form - has influenced greatly subsequent occult teachings concerning graphic symbolism, notably Boehme (see LAW 1772 and CLAVIS) and GABELLA 1615.

MOON Ast. Modern sigil derived directly from the Graeco-Byzantine astrological tradition (see NEUGEBAUER 1959), the printed example being from HYGINUS 1482:

AGRIPPA 1531 traces its form to the horns of the crescent. LEO 1914 departs somewhat from the tradition by linking his sigil for the Moon (which is for him a symbol of 'the most subtle form of matter') with his sigil for light and dark (see LIGHT) which reminds us that the  'semi-circle is...the symbol of the Moon and represents the soul in man, that which is neither wholly spiritual nor wholly material, but partakes of the nature of both and is the connecting link between the spirit and the physical body'.

CARBONELLI 1925 records four mediaeval variants:

CHASSANT 1885 gives a mediaeval abbreviation for luna:

VERARDI 1972 records a sigil +  which may not in fact mean moon.

BERTHELOT 1885 records an early form from an alchemical manuscript in Greek  and a rare sigil which is in fact a short form for the term selene:  The sigil given by CROLLIUS 1670 may have been derived from the Greek tradition:

See also FULL MOON, and the sigils used by the alchemists for the metal SILVER, which may be used synonymously with Moon.

MOON ARCANUM Occ. WIRTH 1927 relates this 18th card of the Tarot pack to the Hebraic TSADE, and accords it the sigillic form:

(see HERMETIC TETRAD), and the standard post mediaeval sigil for the zodiacal sign Cancer:  This latter WIRTH 1927 sees as the Chinese symbol of the 'fecundated Cosmic Egg'.

MOON DECREASING Ast. SHELTON 17C

SOMMERHOFF 1701

MOON INCREASING Ast. SHELTON 17C

SOMMERHOFF 1701 gives two sigils   for both luna crescens and ortus lunae, 'moonrise'.

MOONRISE Ast. SOMMERHOFF 1701

MORNING Occ. KOCH 1930 gives a highly personal sigil, presumably a graphic to indicate the rising sun:

MORTAL ADAM Occ. A sigil originated by DEE 1564 (though derived ultimately from the Christian esoteric tradition) to represent many connected ideas:  He associates the sigil with Mortal Adam, Beginning, Existing before the elements, the Mortifying Self and with the Christos and with Born in a Stable - all ideas derived from the connexion which the sigil has with the first letter of the Greek alphabet ALPHA.

See also IMMORTAL ADAM and ELEMENTS

MORTIFY Alc. LUEDY 1928

MOTHER NATURE Occ. In the sequence of sigils described by BLAVATSKY 1888, outlined in MANIFESTATION, the sigil  is said to be a result of the transformation of the form  which is itself expressive of 'the first manifestation of creative (still passive, because feminine) Nature'. This 'duality' sigil is expressive of 'the first shadowy perception of man', which is connected with procreation, and is feminine because 'man knows his mother more than his father'. The spiritual principle (which is the dot within the circle ) is that which fructifies, and which is significantly concealed.

MOTION Occ. Sigil given by WELLING 1735, derived from diagrammatic sigils in DEE 1564, for 'second motion' which may be seen on one level as the motion of a point towards the periphery, related to the macrocosmic theory set out by DEE 1564, and which may on another level be linked with the influences of the Secundadeian spiritual influences of TRITHEMIUS 1522:  A modern sigil given by CIRLOT 1962 to symbolise the 'movement in the Upper and Lower Worlds' is an extension of the related sigil for INFINITY:  BLAVATSKY 1888 gives the sigil  for 'moving man'.
See also MAN

MOUNTAIN BLUE Alc. Abbreviation for the Latin lapis armenius recorded by SOMMERHOFF 1701  and GESSMANN 1906

MOVING MAN Occ. BLAVATSKY 1888 gives the sigil  Within this context, see ONE.

MULTIPLICATION Alc. MICHAELSPACHER 1616 gives the sigil  next to the sign or constellation Aquarius, probably to symbolise the alchemic process of Multiplication.

MUNDANE CROSS See MANIFESTATION and ORIGIN

MUNDUS INTELLIGIBILIS See WORLD OF INTELLIGENCE

MURIEL Mag. BRAHE 1582 gives two mediaeval sigils for this Angel of zodiacal Cancer:
HEYDON 1664 gives a sigil for Muriel as a 'geomantic spirit', the genius of Via, but this same sigil is given as ruling spirit of zodiacal Cancer by AGRIPPA 1531:
See also SPIRIT OF CANCER.

MUTABILITY Ast. Modern sigil for the Mutable quality, recorded by DE VORE 1947:

MUTABLE CROSS Ast. BAILEY 1934 uses the swastika to symbolise the 'material change and constant movement' of the four zodiacal signs Gemini, Virgo, Sagittarius and Pisces, the mutable signs:

MYRIAD Occ. Sigil recorded by SHEPHERD 1971, probably from the ancient Egyptian hieroglyphic:

MYSTERIOUS PLANETS Ast. ASTROLOGY 1917 gives three sigils said to represent three invisible 'planets' which are related to the signs Aries, Taurus and Gemini, and which will one day become visible as physical bodies. These invisible, and unnamed, planets are related to the zodiacal Hierarchies as follows:

The  Hierarchy of the physical plane:

The  Hierarchy of the Astral Plane:
 The  Hierarchy of the Mental Plane:

MYSTERIOUS SIGILS Mag. RAPHAEL 1879 gives a large series of sigils which he terms 'mysterious characters of the planets', which are in fact sigils derived from geomantic and magical sources - for example, a large number of them are the standard sigillic forms for the geomantic figures (see GEOMANTIC SIGILS):

JUPITER:

MARS:

MERCURY:

NATURAL SULPHUR Alc. BERTHELOT 1885 records a sigil from the Greek alchemical tradition:

NATURE Occ. KOCH 1930 gives a highly personal sigil:
CHASSANT 1884 gives a mediaeval contraction for natura: n̄^a
See MOTHER NATURE and VEGETABILIA.

NEBULOSA Ast. Eighth of the mediaeval lunar mansions, called Al Nathrah in the Arabic astrological system, a sigil for which is given in MANSIONES 14C:

NEGATIVE MARS See PLUTO.

NELAH Mag. Sigil for a spirit (name perhaps a corruption of Nelapa, one of the angels of the Second Heaven), given by HEYDON 1664 to represent the letter N in the secret writing called 'Alphabet of Angels and Genii':

NEPTUNE Ast. The first sigils for this 'modern' planet were constructed around the initials LV for the discoverer, Le Verrier, and sometimes (wrongly) L for Leverrier. SHEPHERD 1971 records three such obsolete forms:

Since 1871 various sigils have been invented by astrologers, perhaps based on the trident of Neptune, though WALTHER 1939 explains the form as being 'really a semicircle over the cross':

DAATH 1901 claims that the sigil  is in fact derived from a repetition of the forms for SAGITTARIUS, thus  and draws an unconventional connexion between this zodiacal sign and the planet.

NODE Ast. The term node is most frequently used without further designation for the Moon's Node, which is dealt with in the present context under CAPUT and CAUDA. However, in certain modern schools of astrology, especially in those concerned with heliocentric charts, the particular node of a planet is indicated by enclosing the traditional planetary sigil in the basic form for the caput or cauda, thus  which is the 'node of Jupiter', taken from SUCHER 1970.

NOTA BENE Occ. Many highly personal sigils have been used by the alchemists, the following being common in early manuscripts, as for example in ISIDORUS 12C:

WORLIDGE 1671 gives the familiar abbreviation:

NUMBER Alc. BERTHELOT 1985 gives the sigil  from Greek alchemical texts.

NUN Occ. The 14th letter of the Hebrew alphabet (see HEBRAIC SCRIPT) for which many derivative forms are given within the tradition of secret alphabets, notably those collected by BARTOLOZZI 1675
 WIRTH 1927 equates Nun with the Tarot arcanum Temperance, and with zodiacal Aquarius, and in his list of derivative forms for the letter  traces the idea of 'water': the historic graphic etymology appears in fact to be from the Egyptian hieroglyphic with the pictorial value of (water) snake, as indicated in JENSEN 1970.

See also FIRE.

OCCULT SALT Occ. In the graphic system of WELLING 1735 the sigil is used to show Salt in all its attributes:
See also SALT.

OCCULT TRIANGLE Occ. In HERMES 1613 this simple sigil  is termed the triangle of the philosophers, and recorded as one of a series of occult structures. It is said to have a multi-layer significance, symbolising the numerous trinities within the alchemical works, such as SALT-SULPHUR-MERCURY, BODY-SOUL-SPIRIT, and even SUN-MOON-MERCURY since the 'Sun and Moon may not be productive without Mercury is the mediator'.

OCCULT WATER Occ. Sigil given by WELLING 1735 to show Water in all its attributes:

OCTAVE Occ. A sigil given by HERMES 1613 as the basic structure for what is called a 'magic vocabulary' concerned with a series of octaves and their inter-relationships:
See also OGDOAD.

OCTONARY Occ. Sigil given by DEE 1564 in a graphic theory of occult symbolism connected with his MONAD:  The sigil is said to be eight-fold because of the sum of angles and lines within its structure. Following on these indications of DEE 1564, the Rosicrucian GABELLA 1615 gives the form:  See also OGDOAD

OCULUS Ast. Ninth of the mediaeval lunar mansions (in fact oculus Leonis), called Al Tarf in the Arabic astrological system, a sigil for which is given by MANSIONES 14C:
A sigil intended for amuletic use is linked with this lunar mansion, recorded by ABANO 1303:

OGDOAD Occ. In the ancient symbolic language discussed by BLAVATSKY 1888, the sigil  or  symbolises the 'eternal and spiral motion of cycles', which is symbolised in its turn by the Caduceus. It shows the regular breathing of the cosmos. This lemniscate, both in its sigil form and in diagrammatic form, plays an important part in modern anthroposophical literature: see for example STEINER 1921.

OMEGA Rel. A number of sigils have been used since early times, based on the form of the last letter of the Greek alphabet, and generally intended to convey the idea of 'the end of things' The esoteric Christian aspect of the sigil is discussed by TESTA 1962, who gives a number of forms:

DEE 1564 constructs a sigil around the omega:  - see IMMORTAL ADAM.

A related sigil is given by VERARDI 1972, as the symbol of God:
 Many variants of this sigil exist, especially in the Byzantine iconographic tradition.

The omega sigil is given most frequently in conjunction with ALPHA, but see also CHRIST, CHRISTMON and JESUS, and in reference to the Immortal Adam, see also MORTAL ADAM.

ONE Occ. In the ancient symbolic language discussed by BLAVATSKY 1888, the one on the (spiritual) plane above is 'no number', a circle:
 On the plane below (physical) it becomes  which signifies among the Alexandrian Initiates a body erect, 'a living standing man, he being the only animal that has this privilege'. By adding a head to this sigil, it was transformed into a  'a symbol of paternity, of the creative potency', whilst the sigil  signifies a moving man, one on his way. In the Pythagorean system, the odd numbers are said to be divine.

OPPOSITION Ast. Several early sigils, mainly involved with joining two circles (the celestial bodies) with a straight line, have come down to us from early astrological systems. The standard form is recorded by FIRMICUS 1499  who gave also the sigil  as an alternative in a woodcut of a horoscope, the sigil cutting through the connecting line drawn between the two planets in opposition.

ASTROLOGICAL 15C  SIGILLIS 17C

SMITH 16C gives for ordinary opposition a variant  and for the opposition between Sun and Moon (see FULL MOON), the sigil  which appears to relate to the most recent syzygy to the time for which the horoscope was cast.

ORIGIN Occ. In the sequence of sigils described by BLAVATSKY 1888, and outlined in MANIFESTATION, the sigil  called the mundane cross, marks the stage (esoterically the third root race) for the incarnation of humanity, the origin of human life in its physical embodiment. The cross within a circle 'symbolises pure Pantheism; when the cross was left uninscribed, it became phallic'. BLAVATSKY 1888 gives an alternative sigil for this symbolic Fall:  explained as denoting the time 'when the separation of the sexes by natural evolution took place - when the figure became  ... the sexless life modified or separated - a double glyph or symbol':  This encircled TAU was said by BLAVATSKY 1888 to have become (during the present period of evolution - that is, during the Fifth Race) in symbology the sacr' and in Hebrew n'cabvah, originally phallic in meaning, but changed into the Egyptian glyph  the emblem of life (see ANKH) and 'still later into the sign of Venus:  Then comes the Svastika (Thor's hammer, or the "Hermetic Cross" now), entirely separated from its Circle' - the circle being the spiritualising agent:  - 'thus becoming purely phallic' in the sigil:  See SWASTIKA. The sigils for Origin show therefore the origin of Man as a spiritual being, and the origin of Man as a material being, enmeshed in Nature.

PARS Ast. Whilst there are very many different Arabian pars - one for each planet save the Sun - the name by itself usually refers to Pars Fortunae, the 'part of fortune', which is the hypothetical point occupied by the Moon if the Sun were to be on the Ascendant of the figure under review.

The common modern sigil is given (for example) by LILLY 1647:
When another pars is to be indicated, the normal procedure is for the standard sigil to be given, followed by one of the sigils for the relevant planet: for example, the 'part of Mercury', sometimes called the part of commerce, may be set out:

The 17th letter of the Hebrew alphabet (see HEBRAIC SCRIPT) for which many derivatives and variants have been given within the tradition of secret alphabets, notably those recorded by BARTOLOZZI 1675:  WIRTH 1927 equates the letter with the STAR ARCANUM of the Tarot pack, and with the constellation Andromeda and zodiacal Pisces. He gives the graphic etymology of the letter form  and traces this back to the idea of 'mouth', which is expressed in an Egyptian hieroglyphic related to RU.

PENTAGRAM Occ. One of the recurrent sigils of occultism, with very many different levels of meaning:  AGRIPPA 1531 reproduces it in symbolic form as representative of the form of the human body, an idea which is expressed in BLAVATSKY 1888, and (through the connexion of the sigil with the planet Venus) in SOMMERHOFF 1701, and in SCHULTZ 1963 (from a heliocentric point of view) - but see MICROCOSMIC PENTAGON. STEINER 1906 treats it as an ancient sigil of the Third Logos and of the Microcosm itself. In the esoteric tradition the pentagram is linked with the etheric or quintessential forces in man, which is perhaps why STEINER 1906 gives the sigil as a symbol of mankind developing itself: 'it is the star that all wise men follow as did the priest-sages in ancient ages'.

The sigil has a wide and varied application: see for example both DEVIL and POPE.

regulated human temperament, and the sigils listed below are perhaps intended to refer to this humour. However, DIDEROT 1763 gives the sigil  which is probably intended to refer to sputum.

SCHNEIDER 1962 records for Phlegma, aqua insipida, the sigils     but these forms appear to be derived directly from SOMMERHOFF 1701, who gives a specifically alchemical definition for the term, and calls it Aqua Mercurii prima.

example in BONATTI 15C  but ultimately derived from Graeco-Byzantine forms, as in NEUGEBAUER 1959 below. The sigil is said by AGRIPPA 1510 to be based on the shape of the fishes, though graphic explanations within the framework of esoteric Christian symbolism relate the sigil to CHRIST (see for example MERCURY 1978 and GETTINGS 1978).

MANSIONES 14C:

PLANETARY SPIRITS Occ. A number of sigils have been preserved from mediaeval sources relating to what are now usually called Planetary Spirits, though at least one group of these were originally the daemons of the planets, and recorded under such name by AGRIPPA 1531. The DAIMON of occultism, like the daimon of the Greeks, was not of course the demon of popular lore, though it has been confused with it in misinformed circles: only the kakadaemon resembled in any way the European demon. Accordingly, to avoid such associations and confusion, the sigils have been preserved under separate entries - see SPIRIT OF JUPITER, SPIRIT OF MARS, SPIRIT OF MERCURY, SPIRIT OF MOON, SPIRIT OF SATURN, SPIRIT OF SUN and SPIRIT OF VENUS. TRITHEMIUS 1522 gives a list of planetary spirits which he called Secundadeis or Intelligencies (the traditional word), and which have been since called Archangels: these are the tutelary rulers of historical epochs, however, and in TRITHEMIUS 1503 there is to be found a list of sigils attached to certain of the names of these Intelligencies, though it is likely that the planetary spirits of the Epochs are derived (via the Arabs) from the Gnostic tradition, whilst the latter groups which bear similar names are derived from the cabbalistic tradition: see the sigils given after the names in the following table, derived from TRITHEMIUS 1503.

PLANET	PLANETARY SPIRIT	PLANETARY ANGEL
JUPITER	BETHOR 	ZACHARIEL
MARS	PHALEG 	SAMUEL
MERCURY	OPHIEL 	RAPHAEL
MOON	PHUL 	GABRIEL
SATURN	ARATRON 	ORIPHIEL
SUN	OCH 	MICHAEL
VENUS	HAGITH 	ANAEL

PLANETARY SYMBOLS Occ. The following account relates to a group of sigils termed planetary which must not be confused with the modern application of the term: for the modern usage, see the lists of sigils under the headings of JUPITER, MARS, MERCURY, MOON, SATURN, SUN and VENUS. The following (alphabetical) list is derived almost exclusively from the mediaeval manuscript tradition, and few of the sigils within it have anything to do with the symbolism common to astrology and alchemy, in spite of the association with the planetary names. Many of these sigils are probably derived from copies of Arabic and oriental letters or words, and have been used almost exclusively for magical purposes, as for example in prophylactic seals and amulets. An enormous number of these sigils have been preserved in manuscripts, and it would be both tiresome and ultimately pointless to list more than those which have, for one reason or another, entered the mainstream of occultism: the list below is therefore a select but incomplete anthology. The sigils are grouped (alphabetically) under the names traditionally ascribed to them, though the specific differences in their use is now somewhat obscure.

PLANT Alc. BERTHELOT 1885 preserves two sigils derived fromGreek alchemical manuscripts: PLATINUM Alc. SCHEFFERS 1775  DALTON 1808

PLEIADES Ast. Mediaeval sigil for the star cluster, sometimes called the Atlantides, in the vicinity of 29° of the constellation Taurus, given by HERMETIS 13C:

AGRIPPA 1510 gives a variant which has entered the European occult stream of symbolism:

PLUTO Ast. The most common European sigilli (see HONE 1951 below) and the most common USA sigil (see JONES 1969 below) have surfaced from numerous suggestions made since the official discovery of this planet in 1930. The planet was named, and ascribed rulership over zodiacal Scorpio long before its official discovery, by PAGAN 1911, who gave the earliest sigil  which is the graphic equivalent of the negative Mars which had rulership over Scorpio until that time. Before this, there had been a hypothetical Pluto, claimed by WEMYSS 1927 to be ruler of Cancer and 'probably the most distant planet from the Sun'. WEMYSS 1927 gives two variants for this hypothetical planet:   but in a later edition of his book (subsequent to the discovery of the modern planet by Lowell) an attempt was made to designate the discovered planet Lowell-Pluto, a name which did not receive wide acceptance, but which may have been instrumental in forming the common European sigil, from the initials of the suggested name:  WEMYSS 1933 suggested the sigil  for his own Lowell-Pluto.

POPULUS Geo. Sigil for one of the sixteen geomantic figures:

A multitude of variants (stars, dots, floral devices, etc.) is used to denote the same four-fold arrangement. Populus is linked by AGRIPPA 1531 with the 'planet' Moon, the element Water, and the zodiacal sign Capricorn. The following sigils are derived from the late-mediaeval tradition, and are sometimes used to denote the Moon itself, as for example in TRITHEMIUS 1503.

recorded by GESSMANN 1906:

BERTHELOT 1885 records a sigil from the Greek tradition:

ALBERTUS 1374 gives a sigil  which is almost certainly a poor copy of the common contraction:

POWDER Alc. Several of the mediaeval sigils below are used synonymously with those for DUST, and in both cases certain of the sigils are derived from an abbreviation of the Latin pulvis.

PREVIOUS SYZYGY Ast. Two sigils have survived, but in both cases the references are generally to the opposition between the luminaries, rather than to the conjunction. A Graeco-Byzantine sigil is given by

NEUGEBAUER 1959  whilst SMITH 16C gives a sigil ∞ which is sometimes preceded by the abbreviation prae to denote the previous conjunction: prae  or opposition: prae $\circ - \circ$

PRIAPUS TAURI Alc. GESSMANN 1906 records several sigils, all clearly related to the zodiacal sigil for TAURUS:

PRIMAL POWER Occ. In the graphic system proposed by HONE 1951, the circle is said to symbolise eternity, the never-ending, 'hence spirit or primal power'. When a dot is placed inside the circle, to produce the modern sigil for the SUN, then 'the circle... signifies the beginning of the emergence of that power':

PRIMORDIAL CIRCLE Occ. BLAVATSKY 1888 in her account of the occult theory of time - dealing specifically with the birth of time, and with the earliest cycle of the year - writes 'The first sign of this primordial circle and cycle made in heaven is the earliest shape of the Ankh-cross  a mere loop which contains both a circle and the cross in one image' ... 'it is the ideograph of a period, an ending, a time.'

PRITHIVI Occ. A sigil which is virtually an equivalent of the occidental EARTH element, given in oriental sources, and associated with the Muladhara, or Root Chakra:
The sigil is said to be of a yellow colour, and is recorded by AVALON 1919.

PROJECTION Alc. MICHAELSPACHER 1616 gives the sigil  next to the sign or constellation Fisces, perhaps to symbolise the alchemical process of Projection (which, needless to say, has nothing to do with the occult spiritual technique of Astral Projection, as it is wrongly termed).

PROOF See TEST.

PSOHDON Mag. SCHEIBLE 1848 gives four variant sigils for this spirit:

PUELLA Geo. Sigil for one of the sixteen geomantic figures:
A multitude of variants (stars, dots, floral devices, etc.) are used to denote the same four-fold arrangement. Puella is linked by AGRIPPA 1531 with the element of Water, the planet Venus, and the zodiacal sign Libra. The following sigils are derived from the late mediaeval tradition, and are sometimes used to denote the planet Venus, as for example in TRITHEMIUS 1503.

PUER Geo. Sigil for one of the sixteen geomantic figures:

PYTHAGOREAN SIGIL Occ. The ancient Pythagorean  is explained by BLAVATSKY 1888 in terms of the binary (of 'Good and Evil') detaching itself from the single Monad. A more exoteric interpretation, relating the sigil to 'choice', is given by WIRTH 1923, who associates the figure with the LOVERS ARCANUM of the Tarot pack. The sigil is also listed by TESTA 1962 as one of the early Christian forms for the CROSS.

QUADRATURE Ast. Sigil given by SHEPHERD 1971 as an obsolete astronomical symbol for the SQUARE aspect:

QUARTILE See SQUARE.

QUATERNARY Occ. DEE 1564 gives the sigil  as part of the graphic system underlying his MONAD, relating to the four elements (but see also TERNARY and OCTONARY, both of which are related to this form). A series of modern sigils, presented as a logical graphic development, is given by CIRLOT 1962. The cross is 'spiritual and neutral':  whilst  is 'the spiritual quaternary acting upon the inferior ternary'. The 'spiritual, active or dynamic' principle is  whilst the 'spiritual, active quaternary acting upon the neutral' is  The 'spiritual quaternary in the universe' is  and the 'material principle within totality':  The 'two quaternaries - spiritual and material - within the totality' is  It must be pointed out that these explanations in no way reflect the real occult nature of these sigils, and are purely modern inventions. QUINTESSENCE Occ. In its occult sense, the fifth element has been given few sigils, perhaps because it is the invisible one of the five, and its unstated presence in a sigil combining the 'visible' elements is understood (see ELEMENTS). As an invisible sigil, the quintessence may be regarded as being symbolised in the space at the centre of the sigil for the four elements recorded by SOMMERHOFF 1701:

HOMER 1723 gives the sigil  as the tenth in the descending series of the so-called Golden Chain of Homer, symbolic of the 'Universal Quintessence', the spirit of which permeates the created world: this could of course be the sigil for the SPIRITUS MUNDI.

HOMER 1757 gives a variant:  See HOMER'S GOLDEN CHAIN.

GEHEIME 1785 gives  for Heavenly Quintessence as though to distinguish this from the Natural or Earthly. GEHEIME 1788 gives the sigil  for Natural Quintessence and a related form for the Heavenly Quintessence: .

ROSY CROSS Occ. WIRTH 1927 gives the sigil  as the union of the Rose and the Cross, the prime sigil of the Rosicrucian stream, 'the great mystery of occult generation'.

ROYAL ARCH CYPHER Occ. A secret script, which exists in several variant forms, constructed around the disposition of the Roman alphabet within the spaces of a basic figure:
In the example script below, discussed by BLAVATSKY 1877, the alphabet has been placed within the basic figure in concurrent adjacent pairs, though there are other methods of allocating the letters to determine different variations as letter equivalents. The script is called The Royal Arch:

RU Occ. Sigil derived by MASSEY 1883 from the Egyptian hieroglyph, and said to be 'the mouth or uterus of birth':
BLAVATSKY 1888 gives this sigil and a variant  for 'floor, gate, mouth, place of outlet' and 'the place of birth' at which the sun rises, or is reborn. Both occultists see the Ru as the top circle of the ANKH  and thus related to the basic sigil for CHRIST.

BLAVATSKY 1888 says that it is 'the feminine type of the birth-place, representing the North', and sees it continued in the Cypriote RQ and the Coptic Ro:

See also TIME.

RUBEUS Geo. One of the sixteen geomantic sigils:  A multitude of variants (stars, dots, floral devices, etc.) is used to denote the same four-fold arrangement. AGRIPPA 1531 links the sigil with the element of Fire, the planet Mars and the zodiacal sign Gemini. The sigils are also sometimes used to symbolise the planet Mars, as for example in TRITHEMIUS 1503.

RUNES Occ. The Nordic runes consist of a group of loosely connected alphabets which were probably designed for magical purposes (the word perhaps being derived from the Gothic runa, 'secret', and cognate with New High German raunen, 'to whisper'), one or two of which have been used in occult texts, and collected by occultists as examples of secret alphabets. An example from the 12th century is given in OCCULTA 12C, in the form of two separate alphabets:

ö	p	q	r	s	t	u	v	w	x	y	z	þ	e

The letters for which there is no European equivalent are set out alongside, to the right. JENSEN 1970 makes a careful study of the runes, from which he selects variant forms, of which the Common German

	✕	W	F	R
*	†	W	F	R
io	ng	ëa	æ	œ

Runes, set out below, are a good example: the two variant forms may be compared instructively with the lower group of 9th and 10th century Danish runes, also given by JENSEN 1970

									42	λ
	B		H	Π			N		<	^
a	b	c	d	e	f	g	h	i	j	k	l	m	n
F	B		X	M	F	X	N	l	e	<	λ	pa	†

Π	B		λ	4	↑	Π		Π				F	Y o	p	q	r	s	t	u	v	w	x	y	z	a	ng
	B			N

The runes have names which are acrophonic, and the following have been called, with a small degree of necessary adjustment, from the list given by JENSEN 1970 - a list which has much agreement with that list given alongside the runes reproduced in the twelfth century version in OCCULTA 12C:

𐌱	FEOH	belongings	𐌲	BEORC	birch

SACRIFICE Occ. A common sigil for the zodiacal sign Libra is given by SUCHER 1975 in his highly personal graphic symbolism, as representative of the 'sacrifice of Divine cosmic forces':  The same source gives as a parallel to this the sigil:  Within the cosm-conception of SUCHER 1975 the cosmic Sacrifice is a necessary continuation to 'provide a fundamental impulse of evolution', and he gives as sigil for this the forms for CREATION  combined with those for sacrifice, in two new and personal sigils   the latter of which is the ancient ANKH.

SAGITTARIUS Ast. Zodiacal sign for the 'Archer', the printed sigil for which is derived from the common mediaeval form, as for example in SCOT 15C, given in HYGINUS 1482:  AGRIPPA 1510 says that the sigil is based on the shape of an arrow, though the division between the arrow end and the material cross is more significant of the dual nature of the sign:

SALNITER Occ. Sigil given by BOEHMEN 1635 to represent the salniter of his occult system:  The upper cross is the 'kingdom of glory', arising out of the fire of the ETERNAL DARK, which combines with the salniter to give the ETERNAL LIGHT.

SALT Alc. A large number of sigils have been preserved for common salt, though confusion reigns because these are frequently used for specific mineral salts. A sigil given by BEATUS 1613 is for alchemic salt:  but within the same text is a diagram presenting a cube as a symbol of the body in the trinity of Spirit, Soul and Body. Salt in its alchemical sense is therefore much more than our ordinary common salt: in the tria philosophorum, salt is commonly given the sigil  as for example in GEHEIME 1788. In WELLING 1735 the sigil  is said to represent alchemical salt because it shows Fire and Water working as one. The following sigils, however, are given in alchemical texts, and probably are intended to refer to common salt.

BARRETT 1801 gives a similar form for his CAMAEL.

SCHEIBLE 1848 gives two sigils:

SHEPHERD 1971 records the common form for MARS:

SAMARITAN SCRIPT Occ. A group of loosely related scripts used as secret alphabets and almost certainly derived from the historic Semitic Samaritan book script. BARTOLOZZI 1675 records one such alphabet which is reproduced here alongside the equivalent forms from the historic Samaritan given (for non-occult purposes) by JENSEN 1970:

א	ב	ג	ד	ה	ו	ז	ח	ט	י	כ	ל	מ	נ	ס	ע
פ	צ	ק	ר	ש	ת
א	ב	ג	ד	ה	ו	ז	ח

A related alphabet recorded by POSTEL 1538 makes an interesting comparison with these, for many of the letter forms are the same (below). A 'Samaritan' script more obviously developed for the secret script tradition is that given (below) by VIGNERE 1586, which, whilst to some extent still related to the historic forms, is imaginative and more in line with the letter-forms of the popular HEBRAIC SCRIPT used in secret cypher:

א	ב	ג	ד	ה	ו	ז	ח	ט	י	כ	ל	מ	נ	ס	ע
פ	צ	ק	ר	ש	ת

א	ב	ג	ד	ה	ו	ז	ח	ט	י	כ	ל	מ	נ
ס	פ	צ	ק	ר	ש	ת

SAMEK Occ. The 15th letter of the Hebrew alphabet (see HEBRAIC SCRIPT) for which many derivative forms are given within the tradition of secret alphabets, notably those culled by BARTOLOZZI 1675: WIRTH 1927 equates Samek with the DEVIL ARCANUM of the Tarot pack, and in the letter-forms which he traces as the development for Samek he claims a vestigial pictorial form of a 'pot' or 'container'. It is certainly more significant, however, that the letter-form might be traced back to the Egyptian hieroglyphic with the pictorial value for 'fish' - see JENSEN 1970.

SAVIOUR Occ. Sigil given in SCHEIBLE 1848, probably as an alternative for the Salvator, CHRIST:

SATURN Ast. Modern sigil derived ultimately from the Graeco-Byzantine tradition, as preserved for example in BERTHELOT 1885 (below), through the mediaeval, as for example in SCOT 15C  to the printed form in HYGINUS 1482:

AGRIPPA 1531 traces its form to the scythe, but this graphic etymology is suspect, as the various early forms of the sigil indicate. LEO 1914 says of the sigil  that it was originally 'the cross over the semi-circle' and is 'the symbol of the soul bound by the form'.

SCHETHALIM Mag. Sigil and name given by HEYDON 1664 to represent the letter S in secret writing called 'Alphabet of Angels and Genii':
In spite of the plural form, the name is intended to apply to one spirit, and may in fact be confused with Shetel.

SCHIN Occ. The 21st letter of the Hebrew alphabet (see HEBRAIC SCRIPT) for which many derivatives and alternative forms are given within the tradition of secret alphabets, notably those collected by BARTOLOZZI 1675:        WIRTH 1927 equates Schin with the WORLD ARCANUM of the Tarot pack, and records the forms by which the letter developed in the sequence     the origin of which he sees in the idea of 'tooth', though it is more likely that the letter was derived from the Egyptian hieroglyph with the pictorial value of 'wood' or 'twig' - see JENSEN 1970.

SCORPIO Ast. Sigil for the zodiacal sign of the 'Scorpion'. The printed version is derived ultimately from the mediaeval tradition, as for example in SCOT 15C  but this form may have been taken from the Graeco-Byzantine tradition (see NEUGEBAUER 1959 below). The modern manuscript form frequently differs from printed forms, as in FOOTE 17C:

AGRIPPA 1531 tells us that the sigil was based on the shape of the Scorpion's sting, though both the Egyptian demotic forms, and the occult tradition (see for example BLAVATSKY 1888) would suggest a derivative from a pictograph of a serpent.

SEA Occ. BERTHELOT 1885 records two sigils from Greek alchemical texts, one of which refers to ordinary sea  the other referring to the idea of an (unspecified) 'sacred sea':

SEAL See LUTATION and PLANETARY SYMBOLS.

SEAL OF SOLOMON Occ. One of the most common devices of occult symbolism, for which a wide number of different explanatory accounts has been given. A form is recorded in SCHRIRE 1966:  An exoteric explanation for this form is related to the theory of the four elements and the corresponding fifth element (quintessence) which according to the esoteric tradition underlie the sensible world of appearance: thus the four 'visible' elements commingle around the invisible 'centre' of the fifth element:

Ascending elements	FIRE
	AIR
Descending elements	WATER
	EARTH

However, see also SENARY, and the remarks on the derived sigil  and its esoteric connexion with the Chain of Being, which relates to the ancient order of the planetary spheres, in the Introduction to this DICTIONARY. See also HEXAGON.

SEALS OF PLANETS Occ. A large number of sigils traditionally called seals have been preserved, though under a wide variety of names - see for example the forms given under MYSTERIOUS SIGILS and PLANETARY SYMBOLS. The following variants are derived from the mediaeval tradition, as recorded by AGRIPPA 1531, but it is to be noted that they are sometimes confused with the Intelligencies and Planetary Spirits given in the same source and in derivatives.

SECRET SCRIPTS Occ. An enormous number of secret alphabets have been recorded in the occult and hermetic tradition, very many of them of a somewhat dubious value, but a few of them used in the occult literature and in various artforms. Some of these alphabets are merely bowdlerised versions of genuine historic alphabets (see for example SAMARITAN SCRIPT). The fifty or so scripts recorded in this Dictionary have all been collected from occult texts (with the exception of most of the scripts in RUNES), and a great many of them have been derived from cabbalistic and Hebraic sources (see HEBRAIC SCRIPT). The most well known of the Hebraic alphabets are those recorded by AGRIPPA 1531, the so-called TRANSITUS FLUVII, the MALACHIM and the CELESTIAL SCRIPT. The following three are (1) the TRANSITUS FLUVII script, given by WINKLER 1930, (2) a manuscript variant of the THEBAN SCRIPT, from ALCHEMICAL 1579, and (3) from BARTOLOZZI 1675:

ס	פ	צ	ק	ר	ש	ת

a	b	c	d	e	f	g	h	i	j	k	l	m	n

o	p	q	r	s	t	u	v	w	x	y	z

κ	ϙ	λ	γ	π	ι	ι	π	υ	'	ϙ	λ	ϙ	ι
σ	υ	ε	ζ	η	η	ψ	ρ

Many non-Hebraic secret scripts - some of them entirely personal and fanciful - have been preserved, a few of them in manuscripts relating to the occult field, as for example the following from MAGICI 17C, in which the nature of the writing pen is itself used as the stylistic base for the script:

a	b	c	d	e	f	g	h	i	j	k	l	m	n
o	p	q	r	s	t	u	v	w	x	y	z

LAMBECIUS 1500 preserves a page of manuscript alphabets relating to the secret or cryptographic tradition, one of which is clearly derived from the Greek alphabet:

Α	Β	Γ	Δ	Ε	Ζ	Η	Θ	Ι	Κ	Λ	Μ	Ν	Ξ
ο	π	ρ	σ	τ	γ	φ	χ	ψ	ω

and another which may give the appearance of being Greek-derived, but which in fact contains sigils from various sources and historic alphabets:

In addition to the fact that the alphabet just recorded is probably derived from different sources, it may well be that it is set out in a sequence which does not reflect the standard alphabetic order in either Greek or Roman, for an adjacent alphabet in the same manuscript (LAMBECTIUS 1500) is obviously intended to transpose letters in the standard cryptographic manner:

Thus, reading in reverse order one obtains alpha α back to eta η and then omega ω backwards to theta θ . This example reveals something of the difficulty attendant upon the reading of such scripts, and even in the collating of the individual letter-forms.

BERTHELOT 1885 records two alphabets which are called the Hellenic and Greek Astrologic. These are representative of the types, designed for the Greek alphabet but, as tradition shows, adaptable to any other alphabet: the second is properly termed astrologic because it incorporates several sigils from the Greek horoscopic art - for example, the first sigil is the common form for the 'sun'.

7	8	L	8	6	8	~	8	~	8	8	E	∞	3
8	w	7	6	8	7	8	8	8	8

Three further alphabets, all culled from SELENUS 1624, will indicate something of the variety of these cyphers: each of them is taken (in the sequence over) from the occultist writings of della Porta, Trithemius and Maurus:

a	b	c	d	e	f	g	h	i	j	k	l	m	n
⊖	7	Σ	λ	Λ	V	○	φ	∩			⌋	χ	⊥

Each of the preceding eleven alphabets has been given mainly as representative of the types of secret scripts - the Hebraic, the Greek and Roman, the personal and the random cyphers (sometimes based on a single alphabet with a volvelle to provide a number of potential alphabets equal to the number of letters in a particular sequence). The main 'traditional' scripts - open secrets, so to speak - recorded within this Dictionary are listed as follows: ADAMIC SCRIPT, ALCHEMIST SCRIPT, APOLLONIAN SCRIPT, BABYLONIAN SCRIPT, CANANEAN SCRIPT, CELESTIAL SCRIPT, CHALDEAN SCRIPT, ETRUSCAN SCRIPT, HEBRAIC SCRIPT, INQUISITORIAL SCRIPT, MALACHIM SCRIPT, NOACHITE SCRIPT, ROSICRUCIAN SCRIPT, ROYAL ARCH CYPHER, RUNES, SAMARITAN SCRIPT, SOLOMONIAN SCRIPT, SUPERCELESTIAL SCRIPT, TEMPLAR SCRIPT, THEBAN SCRIPT and TRANSITUS FLUVII.

SECRET WISDOM Occ. A sigil given in HERMES 1613 is called the given as one of a series of graphic structures related to occult ideas. The sigil has a multi-layer significance, but is virtually illustrative of the text attributed to Aristotle by the alchemists: Divide the alchemical stone into the four elements, rectify these, then conjoin them as one: in the whole you will have the Magisterium.

SENARY Occ. Sigil given by BLAVATSKY 1888 ✧ intended to show the commingling of the three (philosophical) fires with the three (philosophical) waters, 'whence results the procreation of the elements of all things'. BLAVATSKY 1888 claims that it is wrongly called the Seal of Solomon, and adduces argument as to why the sigil, with a central dot, is a decad: ✧

See SEAL OF SOLOMON.

SENSORY Occ. A modern sigil given by CIRLOT 1962 as 'sensory, anthropomorphic principle':  This view of the sigil does in fact find some support in the occult tradition, as for example in AGRIPPA 1531, STEINER 1904 and SUCHER 1970.

SEPARATE A/c. The sigil is intended to denote the verbal sense of the word in ALCHEMICAL 17C:

SEPARATION A/c. MICHAELSPACHER 1616 gives the sigil  next to the sign or constellation Scorpio, either to symbolise the alchemical process of Separation, or (less likely) the alchemical Sulphur.

SEPTENARY MAN Occ. Sigil given by BLAVATSKY 1888 to represent the image of the seven principles within man, the assumption being that the senary is symbol of physical man (the six dimensions of all bodies) plus the immortal soul, which is symbolised in the seven points of the sigil:  The triangle is symbolic of the three 'higher spiritual beings of man - those human principles still capable of development, called in theosophical parlance Atma, Buddhi and Manas. The square represents those spiritual bodies which have been developed, if not yet controlled; the 'principle of animal desire' the Kama-rupa, the 'vehicle of life' the Linga-sarira, the power productive of vital phenomena, which is the Prana, and the physical body itself, which is built up from substances formed and moulded over the Linga-sarira by the action of Prana. BLAVATSKY 1888 develops many parallelisms between the triad and the quaternary of this sigil, but broadly speaking the triad represents the cosmic or spiritual element (the upper Sephiroth) whilst the Quaternary, which emanates from the triad, symbolises the 'Heavenly Man', the sexless Adam-Kadmon, who may become a septenate 'by emanating from itself the additional three principles'. But see also HEXAGON.

DEE 1564 makes of the simple cross a septenary from the addition of three  (two lines and an intersection) and four  (the four arms of the cross), which is clearly intended to link with the occult septenary of man's spiritual nature, seen either as the combination of the body (four elements) with the three spiritual principles of what would in modern occultism be termed the etheric, astral and ego, or as the image of man related to the planets in his present state, along with his future spiritual development. DEE 1564 argues in a special graphic logic that the cross is at once the numerates:

ONE:  The cross alone.
 TWO:  Two lines.
 THREE:  Two lines plus the point of intersection.
 FOUR:  The four arms of the cross.

The addition of 1, 2, 3 and 4 gives 10. The multiplication of the first triad with the second senary gives 21 (3 x 7) - this argument is related to the alphabet of the Elizabethan because the cross (X) is the 21st letter.

SEPTILE Ast. Sigil for the aspect of 51 degrees, 25 minutes, given by MEYER 1974:

SERAPHIM Ast. SUCHER 1975 appears to link the sigil for CAPRICORN  with the Sphere of the Seraphim, which are traditionally associated with the spheres beyond that of Saturn, most frequently with the stellatum, or with the zodiac.
 See SPHERE OF SATURN

SESQUQUADRATE Ast. The pure sigils for this aspect of 135 degrees are formed from the union of a 'square plus half a square', since the aspect relates to the addition of a pure SQUARE with a SEMI-SQUARE.

SEXUAL ENERGY Occ. A sigil which is in fact a variant form for MARS is linked in an alchemical figure of the microcosm with the sexual parts, presumably to signify the earth-bound, or demonic, nature of the sexual energies, in VALENTINE 1645: †

In a similar manner, the sigil for the MOON is placed over the sexual parts in FLUDD 1617, the purpose being to link the sexual energies with the sublunar demonic forces: ☾

SILVER Alc. Since within the alchemical tradition the term 'silver' is synonymous with the astrological MOON, all the sigils for the planet may be used also to signify the metal. SOMMERHOFF 1701 records several sigils under Argentum, all of which may be used to denote the many hermetic names, such as corpus album, fermentum album, lumen minus, Mater, Diana, uxor odorifera and so on:
The following sigils appear to have been intended specifically for the metal.

Sometimes CAPUT MORTUUM is confused with skull, though properly this is the undifferentiated residual powder at the end of an alchemical process, much as the skull is itself the undifferentiated remnant at the end of the alchemical process of life.

SOLAR SYSTEM Ast. LEO 1914 gives the sigil  which is said to symbolize 'both the centre and the circumference of the solar system'. From this sigil he derives the form  for light and dark (see LIGHT), which is unfortunately like the occult sigil for DEATH, from the Greek thanatos. But see also DEITY for a sigil derived from the theosophic tradition within which LEO 1914 worked.

SOLSTICES Occ. BLAVATSKY 1888 gives the sigil  as representing the 'cross of the two equinoxes and the two solstices placed within the figure of the earth's path'.

See also EQUINOX

SOLUTIO Alc. The original connotation of resolving or setting free or dissolving appears to have stayed within certain alchemical contexts, but in a few cases the term is used of the power to release subjects from malignant magical influences. The following sigils are, however, almost certainly restricted to the earlier alchemical meaning.

SORATE Geo. Sigil supposed by HEYDON 1664 to be that for the 'geomantic spirit', the ruler of FORTUNA MINOR and FORTUNA MAJOR, but in fact a poor (reversed) copy of that given by AGRIPPA 1531 as ruling spirit of the Sun:

SORCERY See KALI YUGA.

SOUL Occ. LEO 1914 follows the hermetic tradition and links the sigil for the Moon  with the soul, as symbol of 'that which is neither wholly spiritual nor wholly material, but partakes of the nature of both, and is the connecting link between the spirit and the physical body'. HONE 1951 follows in the same theosophic tradition, and gives the sigils   relating to the astrological context. Sometimes the use of a sigil suggests that the denotation is in fact confused with the word SPIRIT, as for example in AUREUS 1613, who gives the form  for sulphur or soul. Within a strictly religious context, CHASSANT 1884 gives a short-form for the Latin anima, of mediaeval derivation:  See also ANIMALIA and SPIRIT-SOUL.

SPANISH WINE Alc. DIDEROT 1763

SPHERE Occ. A mediaeval short-form is recorded by CHASSANT 1884 for the Latin sphera, which does not refer to the body of the planet but to the spirital area within its orbit:  BERTHELOT 1885 records a sigil from the Greek astrological tradition, intended to refer to the celestial spheres in general:  As the entries under specific planets below indicate, it was usual for astrologers to use the sigils which we would now designate to the planetary bodies themselves to denote the spheres. However, ISIDORUS 12C gives the following forms which, since they stand outside the familiar planetary sigillic tradition, may be taken as symbolising the spheres which were in later cosmologies confused with the planets:

LUNA (MOON)

MERCURIUS

LUCIFER ('MORNING STAR' VENUS)

VESPER ('EVENING STAR')

SOL (SUN)

SETON (JUPITER)

SATURNUS

CROSLAND 1962 records a general form, said to be mediaeval:

SPHERE OF JUPITER Ast. In the mediaeval astrological system, this sphere is associated with the Dominions or Kyriotetes, linked with the idea of Virtue or Justice - but see the entry on SPHERE, above. Working from the mediaeval forms, BRAHE 1582 gives the planetary sigil  but any of the forms for JUPITER could theoretically be used to denote the sphere, as could the sigils for the INTELLIGENCIES who move the spheres, or the named ruler ZACHARIEL. But see also SPIRIT OF JUPITER.

SPHERE OF MARS Ast. In the mediaeval astrological systems, this sphere is associated with the Virtues or Virtutes, the Dynamis of the Dionysian system. BRAHE 1582 gives a standard planetary sigil for the sphere  but any of the forms for MARS could be used in theory to denote the sphere, as could the sigils for the INTELLIGENCIES who move the spheres, or the named ruler SAMAEI. But see also SPIRIT OF MARS.

SPHERE OF MERCURY Ast. In the mediaeval astrological system, this sphere is associated with the Archangels, the tutelary spirits of Nations. BRAHE 1582 gives the standard planetary sigil  but any of the forms for MERCURY could theoretically be used to denote the sphere, as could the sigils for the INTELLIGENCIES who move the sphere, or the named rulers RAFAEL, OFHIEL or Zadkiel. But see also SPIRIT OF MERCURY.

SPHERE OF THE MOON Ast. In the mediaeval astrological system, this sphere is associated with the angels, the guardian spirits of individual human beings (though the word ANGEL is frequently used in a generic sense for all the different Orders of spiritual beings). BRAHE 1582 gives the standard lunar sigil  but any of the forms for the MOON could in theory be used to denote the sphere, as could the sigils for the INTELLIGENCIES who move the spheres, or the named ruler GABRIEL. In modern western occultism this sphere is called karmaloka, in esoteric Christianity, Purgatory. See also SPIRIT OF THE MOON.

SPHERE OF SATURN Ast. In the mediaeval astrological system, this sphere is associated with the Thrones, the spiritual beings who mark the end of time. BRAHE 1582 gives the standard planetary sigil  but any of the forms for SATURN could theoretically be used to denote the sphere, as could the sigils for the INTELLIGENCIES who move the spheres, or the named rulers CASSIEL or ORIPHIEL. But see also SPIRIT OF SATURN.

SPHERE OF THE SUN Ast. In the mediaeval astrological system, this sphere is associated with the Powers or Exusiai, whose virtue is that of Prudence. BRAHE 1582 gives the standard modern solar sigil  but any of the forms used for SUN could theoretically be used, as could the sigils used for the INTELLIGENCIES who move the spheres, or the named ruler MICHAEL. But see also SPIRIT OF THE SUN.

SPHERE OF VENUS Ast. In the mediaeval astrological systems, this sphere is associated with the Archai, those spiritual beings who rule over the Ages, and sometimes (as in the celestial system outlined by Dante) with the Principalities. BRAHE 1582 gives the standard planetary sigil  but any of the forms for VENUS could theoretically be used, as could the sigils for the INTELLIGENCIES who move the spheres, or the named ruler ANAEL. But see also the two different sigils given under SPHERE, and see also SPIRIT OF VENUS.

SPICA Ast. A late-mediaeval sigil for the binary alpha Virginis is given by AGRIPPA 1510, which is in fact a variant on the sigil given for the identical fixed star under the name ACHIMER:  For a study of the graphic nature of this later sigil, see MERCURY 1978. The fourteenth of the mediaeval lunar mansions is sometimes also called Spica, being the Al Simak of the Arabian astrological system, for which a sigil is given in MANSIONES 14C: .

SUCHER 1975 links the sigil  with Isis imagery, along with the graphic ideas expressed in his sigils for SACRIFICE, and with the zodiacal forms for the sign Taurus: 'To the supreme spiritual "Sun" forces of Life are now added the Moon-like forces of cosmic-existence'. One takes from this the component sigil  as representative of the Cosmic Soul, the sigil  as representative of the cosmic spirit. The combined sigil is undoubtedly Rosicrucian in origin, however, though rarely found divorced from a complex setting, and rarely given a specific meaning, though see for example STEINER 1910, where it is accorded a different meaning.

STRENGTH ARCANUM Occ. WIRTE 1927 relates this 11th card of the Tarot pack to the Hebraic CAPH, and accords it a sigil which he describes as 'the pentagram described in the hexagram', for which he gives the version:  This is, of course, a hexagram within a hexagram, and the correct sigil should no doubt be:

SUBSTANCE Occ. WELLING 1735 gives the sigil  to represent the tangible universe, the meeting of Fire and Water, the respective sigils for which are the opposing directions of the simple triangle, representing the upward striving of fire  and the downward striving of water:

SULPHUR Alc. Very many sigils exist, of which those given below are merely the most common. CARBONELLI 1925 reproduces four of the most frequently used in post-mediaeval documents:

BERTHELOT 1885 gives a few sigils from the Greek alchemical tradition for ordinary sulphur     for unburned sulphur  and natural sulphur:

SUN Ast. The common sigil used in modern times, the encircled dot  was introduced during the Italian Renaissance (see SOLAR 1978) from the esoteric Christian tradition. Prior to that, in both alchemical and astrological texts the sun was symbolised by means of one or other of the Graeco-Byzantine sigils, most usually the  which is presumably a derivative of the short-form helios.

SUN ARCANUM Occ. WIRTH 1927 relates this 19th arcanum of the Tarot pack to the Hebraic KOPH. Since the astrological associations of the card include the Sun and zodiacal Gemini, WIRTH 1927 gives the sigils   the latter of which corresponds more to the iconography of the card than to any zodiacal tradition.

SUPERCELESTIAL SCRIPT Occ. One of the numerous alphabets from occult sources, given by RIVIERE 1938 alongside a Roman alphabet:

a	b	c	d	e	f	g	h	i	j	k	l	m	n

o	p	q	r	s	t	u	v	w	x	y	z

If this alphabet is translated liberally back into its original Hebraic equivalent, then it will be seen to closely resemble the CELESTIAL SCRIPT used by occultists:

א	ב	ג	ד	ה	ו	ז	ח	ט	י	כ	ל	מ	נ

SWASTIKA Occ. In her study of the ancient symbolic language, BLAVATSKY 1888 says that 'few world symbols are more pregnant with real occult meaning than the Swastika':  It represents the four cardinal points, the Zenith and the Nadir, and is thus a SENARY, and might reasonably be used as a sigil for the ZODIAC, if not for the horoscope chart. The initiated may trace its form according to BLAVATSKY 1888 'the relation of the Seen and the Unseen'. In the Macrocosmic work it is called the 'Hammer of Creation' and 'refers to the continual motion and revolution of the invisible Kosmos of Forces'. It points to the cycles of Time of the world's axes and their equatorial belts: 'the two lines forming the Swastica meaning Spirit and Matter, the four hooks suggesting the motion in the revolving cycles'. Applied to the Microcosm it depicts man between heaven and earth, the right hand being raised at the end of the horizontal arm, the left pointing to the Earth. It is, insists BLAVATSKY 1888, 'at one and the same time an Alchemical, Cosmogonical, Anthropological and Magical sign, with seven keys to its inner meaning'.

TAROT Occ. The sigils used by WIRTH 1927 in connexion with his attempt to relate the Tarot arcana to the cabbalistic tradition are given under separate headings as follows: CHARIOT, DEATH ARCANUM, DEVIL ARCANUM, EMPEROR, EMPRESS, FOOL ARCANUM, HANGING MAN, HERMIT, HOUSE OF GOD, JUDGEMENT, JUGGLER, LADY POPE, LOVERS ARCANUM, MOON ARCANUM, POPE, STAR ARCANUM, STRENGTH ARCANUM, SUN ARCANUM, WHEEL OF FORTUNE, WORLD ARCANUM. TAT Occ. An Egyptian hieroglyph, given in sigillic form by SHEPHERD 1971 as meaning myriad:

TAU Occ. Claimed by many scholars to be the earliest form of the CROSS, though BLAVATSKY 1877 traces its occult meaning to a combination of Greek letter and Arabic number, giving it as a 'symbol of life, and of life eternal: of earthly life, because (gamma)  is the symbol of the Earth (Gaia), and of "life eternal" because the figure 7 is the symbol of the same life linked with the divine life:

TESTA 1962 records some of the early Christian forms:

GETTINGS 1978 traces the use of the sigil in certain architectural and artistic forms:

BLAVATSKY 1888 derives the sigil  from the Tau, perhaps in error, and calls it the 'Astronomical Cross of Egypt'.

The Tau is also the 22nd letter of the Hebraic alphabet (see HEBRAIC SCRIPT), and many derivatives have been given for the letter within the tradition of secret alphabets - notably those collected by

BARTOLOZZI 1675:

WIRTH 1927 equates the card and letter form with the FOOL ARCANUM of the Tarot pack, and traces the graphic forms     back to the idea of CROSS. As JENSEN 1970 shows, the Tau may be traced back to an Egyptian hieroglyphic with the pictorial value of the 'sign of Life', the Egyptian ANKH:

TAURUS Ast. Zodiacal sign of the Bull. The printed version of the sigil is derived from the late-mediaeval manuscript tradition, which links with one of the forms used in the Graeco-Byzantine - see as example, HYGINUS 1482:

The form is said by AGRIPPA 1531 to be based on the shape of the bull, horns, but the derivation from the earlier tradition would appear to deny this: see for example GETTINGS 1978.

TEJAS Occ. Sometimes called Taijas or Agni, this is the oriental equivalent of the FIRE element, associated with the Manipura or Navel chakra:  The sigil is said to be of a red colour, and is recorded by AVALON 1919.

TEMPERAMENTS Occ. The four so-called 'Hippocratic' or 'Galenic' humours are the expression on the microcosmic plane of the working of the four ELEMENTS, as follows: AIR is associated with the Sanguine, EARTH with the Melancholic, FIRE with the Choleric, and WATER with the Phlegmatic. In almost every case, these four temperaments are represented by sigils derived from those used to denote the four Elements, and the standard form of symbolism would therefore be:

SANGUINE   =  MELANCHOLIC
CHOLERIC     PHLEGMATIC

The wide range of sigils associated with these elements may be used to denote the four aspects of the human temperament - for example, TRITHEMIUS 1503 gives sigils specifically for COLERA:  SANGUIS:  PITULA (Phlegmatic):  MELANCHOLIA:  but these sigils are used in his earlier list for the ELEMENTS. GETTINGS 1965 records four groups of sigils for the chiromnomical types, related to the four temperaments: FIRE (male):  (female):  AIR (male):  (female):  WATER (male):  (female):  EARTH (male):  (female):  In a manuscript from Gotha (given in KLIBANSKY 1964) the following forms are found alongside images of the four temperaments as riders: CHOLERIC:  SANGUINE:  PHLEGMATIC:  and MELANCHOLIC:

TENTH HOUSE Ast. OMONT 1894 records a sigil from the Graeco-Byzantine astrological tradition for the mesourania, the equivalent of the modern MIDHEAVEN:

TEREBINTH Alc. The various contexts would suggest that the sigil refers to the resin (or to the turpentine), rather than to the terebinth tree itself.

DIDEROT 1763  ER

GESSMANN 1906

TERNARIUS Occ. GABELLA 1615, following DEE 1564 in some respects, gives two 'trinity' sigils. The first is related to the theory derived from the modern sigil for the SUN () which is pictured as the closing of the ternarius around the central point:  The second consists of two lines, in which the copula is presumed at their junction:  DEE 1564 gives the TERNARY in a related form, as the sum of the two lines of the cross, meeting at the intersection (which is the third element):  thus  is the triad of body, soul and spirit.

TERNARY Occ. In the ancient symbolic language discussed by BLAVATSKY 1888, the sigil  is said to be 'the first of the geometrical figures', and it is accorded a complex esoteric interpretation relating to the triadic nature of the spiritual world: see for example TERNARIUS.

In the series of sigils given by CIRLOT 1962, as a logical graphic development, the 'neutral and successive' ternary is  whilst  is 'evolutive, since the vertical axis is the greater' and  is 'involution since it is inverted'. Such thought-out symbolism relating to the triad ultimately goes back to Boehme's use of the triangular sigils given in LAW 1772, relating to the cosmic struggle between the MEAKNESS  and the WRATH:  As indicated in LAW 1772, these unite to form the SEAL OF SOLOMON:  See ARCHETYPES.

TETH Occ. The 9th letter of the Hebrew alphabet (see HEBRAIC SCRIPT) for which many derivative forms have been given within the tradition of secret scripts, notably those collected by BARTOLOZZI 1675:  WIRTH 1927 equates Teth with the HERMIT card of the Tarot pack, and gives a graphic etymology for the letter  which he traces back to the idea of 'tree'.

THREE EARTHS Occ. Sigils given in HERMETICUM 17C as the 'three earth sigils':

THREE FIRES Occ. Sigils given in HERMETICUM 17C as the 'three fire sigils':

THREE PRINCIPLES Occ. STEINER 1906 gives three symbols by which in every age the 'three Divine principles have been represented in occultism'  The  is the First Logos, the Godhead, the  is the Second Logos, or Macrocosm, while the  is the Third Logos, or Microcosm. The connexion between these three are conceived as a creative relationship. The first Logos is the 'one primal source and centre of manifestation', and may be conceived as 'a life-begetting warmth' suffusing the whole universe by which the macrocosmic life is quickened and reflected in the creative activity of the human soul.

TRANSPLUTO Ast. HAWKINS 1976

TREBS Ast. Sigil for the twentieth of the mediaeval lunar mansions, called Al Na'am in the Arabian system of manzils, recorded in

MANSIONES 14C:

TRIGRAMS Mag. The philosophical machine, and divinatory system, known as the I Ching, or Book of Change is based upon the interpretation of six-lined figures constructed from yin  or yang  lines, which are presented in groups of three (for example ) each with a complex series of associations and characteristics, each representing 'cosmic forces' which are seen as relating together to establish situations which have been named and studied within the text of the I Ching. Thus, a lower group of three lines  may 'meet' or unite with, an upper group of three lines  to produce the figure  which has been called Chung Fu (中孚) 'Inner Truth', to which an extensive explanatory text has been appended. The result of mixing the two yin and yang lines is eight trigrams, with the following names, attributes, images and family relationships, culled from WILHELM 1951:

	CH' IEN	乾	creative	strong	heaven	father
	K' UN	坤	receptive	yielding	earth	mother
	CHÊN	震	arousing	inciting	thunder	first son

TRIGONUM Ast. OMONT 1894 records a Graeco-Byzantine sigil, the trigonum, which is the equivalent of the modern TRINE aspect:

TRINE Ast. Sigil for the astrological aspect of 120 degrees, derived from the earliest Graeco-Byzantine manuscript tradition (see TRIGONUM), given for example in KALENDAR 15C:

LUCCA 17C gives the form  but this is rare.

TRINITY Rel. To judge from the numerous records, virtually any three-pointed sigil may be used to denote the idea of trinity, even though a specialist use might be intended by the particular form (see TRINE for example). The early Christian sigils recorded by TESTA 1962 include the forms:        VERARDI 1972 gives  whilst KOCH 1930 gives the furca  and SHEPHERD 1971 gives the triquetra  all of which are common in occult and esoteric sources.

TRISTITIA Geo. Sigil for one of the sixteen geomantic figures, given by AGRIPPA 1531:  A multitude of variants (stars, dots, floral devices, etc.) are used to denote the same four-fold arrangement. Tristitia is linked by AGRIPPA 1531 with the element of Earth, the planet Saturn, and the zodiacal sign Scorpio. The following sigils are derived from late-mediaeval sources, and are sometimes used to denote the planet Saturn, as for example in TRITHEMIUS 1503.

TRUE SALTPETRE Alc. WELLING 1735 proposes the following sigil, in his personal graphic system:

TSADE Occ. The 18th letter of the Hebrew alphabet (see HEBRAIC SCRIPT) for which many derivative forms are given within the tradition of secret scripts, notably those collected by BARTOLOZZI 1675:         WIRTH 1927 equates Tsade with the MOON ARCANUM of the Tarot pack, and traces the derivative forms of the letter      to the idea of 'javelin'. It is likely, however, that the letter is derived from an Egyptian hieroglyphic with the pictorial value of 'countenance', which in the Hierarchic script was written:

UNION Occ. Sigil given by GEHEIME 1785  derived from the idea of union attained through the alchemical process of solve et coagulo, though the sigil does appear to be used for the union of opposites, as for example in the union of male and female, Sun and Moon, Mars and Venus, and so on, as well as for the union of Sulphur and Mercury, so clearly indicated within the form of the sigil.

UNITY Occ. Sigil given in HERMES 1613, with a multi-layer meaning, for such principles as Mercury of the Philosophers, the Materia Prima, and for the Mercury which is 'the beginning, purpose and end of the alchemical work':

DEE 1564 intended his famous MONAD sigil  to represent Unity.

URANUS Ast. The modern sigil is generally explained as being derived from the initial letter of Herschel, as for example in HONE 1951:  However, already WILSON 1819 calls the planet Ouranos, and accords it the sigil:  and VARLEY 1828, who still calls it Herschel, and ascribes it rule over the zodiacal Aquarius, gives it a related form of sigil:  The planet is still called Herschel in certain astrological texts. As with the other so-called 'modern' planets, the sigils used to denote this planet are highly personal ones, and more than often the result of confused thinking, or of somewhat specialist views of the nature of symbolism: for example, the author uses the sigil  which has, so far as he knows, never been published. LEO 1914 says that the sigil  'symbolises the unity of the three symbols ( will,  wisdom and  activity) on a higher grade than Mercury, of which it is the higher octave'. The following sigils are by far the most common.

V

VABAM Mag. Name and sigil for this spirit given by HEYDON 1664 to represent the letters U and V in the secret writing called 'Alphabet of Angels and Genii':

VALERIAN Alc. BERTHELOT 1885 records a Greek sigil:

VAPOUR Occ. BERTHELOT 1885 gives the Greek alchemical sigil  from a text which implies that this is a celestial vapour: see both SKY and CELESTIAL VAPOUR.

VAPOUR BATH Alc. DIDEROT 1763
 GESSMANN 1906 V VB R

VAU Occ. The 6th letter of the Hebrew alphabet (see HEBRAIC SCRIPT), for which many derivatives are given within the tradition of secret alphabets, notably those collected by BARTOLOZZI 1675:
 WIRTH 1927 equates Vau with the LOVERS ARCANUM of the Tarot pack, and gives the derivative forms  as the graphic etymology for the letter, which he traces back to the idea of 'small hook': however, research into the Egyptian pictorial origin for the letter indicates a development along lines of the following - hieroglyphic  hierarchic  Old Tamudic South Arabian  Old Phoenician  Moabite  and since the pictorial equivalent of the Egyptian hieroglyphic is a 'knob' suggesting the idea of 'opening' or 'entrance', then the significance of the link with both the LOVERS ARCANUM and with the Pythagorean sigil for 'choice' (suggested by WIRTH 1927)  which relates to the form of the Moabite equivalent, becomes clear.

VAYU Occ. An oriental equivalent of the European AIR element, associated with the Anahata or Heart chakra:  The sigil is recorded in a Western context by AVALON 1919, and is said to be smoky grey colour.

VEGETABILIA Occ. The following sigils do not refer specifically to vegetative life, but to the concatenation of forces which through an invisible activity support vegetative life: thus, in terms of modern occultism, the term is approximately the equivalent of the ETHERIC.

VENTER ARIETIS Ast. The second of the mediaeval lunar mansions, called Al Butain in the Arabian astrological system, the sigil being preserved in MANSIONES 14C:

A sigil which has been employed in amuletic use, and associated with this mansion, is given by ABANO 1303:

VENTER GEMINORUM See SIDUS PARVUM

VENTER LEONIS See CAPILLUS

VENTER VIRGINIS Ast. A sigil given in ABANO 1303 was employed for amuletic purposes, and associated with the thirteen lunar mansions of the astrological tradition:

VENUS Ast. The modern sigil for this planet is derived ultimately from the Greek astrological system, by way of the mediaeval manuscript (see for example CONJURATION 14C), the printed version being found in HYGINUS 1482:  AGRIPPA 1531 traces its form to the mirror, but DEE 1564 gives a construction from the Sun and the four elements. LEO 1914 says that the sigil  is 'symbol of Spirit triumphant over matter, circle over cross' (see HERMETIC TRIAD), though this largely contradicts the hermetic tradition which sees the Venusian impulse as essentially involving a descent into incarnation, an entanglement in matter (hence perhaps the esoteric significance of Agrippa's 'mirror'). When SOMMERHOFF 1701 wrote Venus Microcosmi sunt Renes, he had in mind that the 'renes' were the seat of human affections - a distinct link with the Venus Pudica of both the occult and the artistic tradition.

VERCHIEL Mag. BRAHE 1582 gives several mediaeval characters for the 'angel of Leo':

HEYDON 1664 gives the same name as the genius of the geomantic Fortuna minor and Fortuna major, though the sigil he gives for this genius  is probably related to that given for the ruling spirit of Leo by AGRIPPA 1531:

VERDIGRIS Alc. There is some confusion regarding the many sigils which have been preserved to denote verdigris, a confusion which probably stems from the variety of names by which the sigils are described or listed. The following are selected from the least dubious of the numerous sources.

THIERENS 1931 suggested  as the sigil for the 'planetary principle' of the Roman Vesta and the Greek Hestia, as the 'higher octave' of Mars.

VIA Geo. Sigil for one of the sixteen geomantic figures:  A large number of variants (stars, dots, floral devices, etc.) is used to denote the same four-fold structure of the sigil. Via is linked by AGRIPPA 1531 with the element of Water, the planet Moon, and the zodiacal sign Leo. The following sigils are derived from late mediaeval sources, and are sometimes used to denote the Moon - as for example in TRITHEMIUS 1503 who gives (no doubt in copyist error), the form:

WALTER 1970 gives two of the more simple sigils derived from the ancient Egyptian alchemical tradition:

VIRGIN Occ. The 'cabbalistic' sigil for virginity is given by SHEPHERD 1971  but in regard to this sigil, see RU.

SOMMERHOFF 1701 gives the sigils   for Virgin Earth.

GESSMANN 1906 gives for Virgin Wax:

The zodiacal sign VIRGO is sometimes called Virgin.

VIRGIN EARTH See VIRGIN.

VIRGIN WAX See VIRGIN and WAX.

VIRGO Ast. Zodiacal sign of the 'Virgin', the printed version of the sigil given by HYGINUS 1482, derived from the mediaeval manuscript tradition:  The sigil is said by AGRIPPA 1531 to be based on the shape of an ear of corn - the Spica carried in the arms of the constellation figure, but this suggestion is as unfounded as the suggestion of KIRCHER 1655 that it was derived from three ears of corn. ALLEN 1899 records the idea that the sigil is derived from the initials MV, for MARIA VIRGO, though an esoteric tradition derives the form from a legend concerning the Fall of Man (see GETTINGS 1978).

WELLING 1735 records three specialised sigils, the first of which is intended to show a 'reflection' of the higher spiritual forces (but in the same text, the sigil is used also to denote common destructive sulphur):

The second sigil is said by WELLING 1735 to represent the 'invisible spiritual Water', that occult water which was supposed to have existed before the descent of Lucifer:

The third sigil given by WELLING 1735 may be confused with other sigils, for example with one of the forms for ORPIMENT:

Among other rarities, OLIVER 1826 gives the sigil  as an 'Ancient Egyptian symbol' for elemental water.

For common water, DIDEROT 1763 gives two variants   GESSMANN 1906 gives three    as well as recording a sigil for hot water:

For unsavoury water, GESSMANN 1906 gives the form:

KOCH 1930 gives the sigil  which may be wrongly copied from those given for the THREE WATERS.

YIN AND YANG Occ. BLAVATSKY 1888 gives the sigils for yin  and yang  as verticals, but it is more usual for them to be expressed as horizontals, even in Chinese texts, and in the translation of the I CHING by WILHELM 1951:  and  In an ancient sigil called in Chinese t'ai chi, the yin and yang are united in a circle, as areas of 'dark' and 'light' respectively, each containing within itself a seedling element of the other, in the form of a small dot:
 The doctrine underlying these important polar opposites is extremely complex, but in simple terms, the yin is feminine, dark, lunar, hidden, passive and receptive: the yang is masculine, light, solar, external, active and penetrating. It is the interaction of these polarities which are figured in the series of eight TRIGRAMS which underlie the philosophy of the Hexagrammic sequence of the Chinese I Ching.

YOLK OF EGG Alc. GESSMANN 1906 records several sigils, three of which are constructed around the capital letter V, from the latin vitellus:

YSCHIEL Mag. Sigil for spirit (perhaps Yaschiel) given by HEYDON 1664 to represent the letter Y in the secret writing called the 'Alphabet of Angels and Genii':

ZACHARIEL Mag. Mediaeval sigils recorded by TRITHEMIUS 1503 for the planetary angel of Jupiter:
 BARRETT 1801 uses similar sigils for SACHIEL.

ZAIN Occ. The 7th letter of the Hebrew alphabet (see HEBRAIC SCRIPT), for which many derivative forms are given within the tradition of secret alphabets, notably those collected by BARTOLOZZI 1675:

WIRTH 1927 associates zain with the CHARIOT card of the Tarot pack, and links the origin of the graphic etymology he traces for the letter with the idea of 'weapon'. In fact the pictorial value of the Egyptian hieroglyphic from which the letter was derived appears to have been 'decorated staff'.

ZAZEL Geo. Sigil given by HEYDON 1664 for the geomantic spirit, ruler of Tristitia and Cancer:

Appendices

The following appendices consist of selections of sigils designed to give a general view of the development of a number of important forms from mediaeval to modern times. A series of sigils from four mediaeval manuscripts may be compared with forms 'authorised' by the printing press in AGRIPPA 1531, through to the modern sigils of DEUTSCHE 1980. A selection of frequently used alchemical sigils from WORLIDGE 1651 are set alongside the neo-alchemical forms of BERGMANN 1785. Specialist derivatives and variants on all these sigils may be studied in the individual entries within the Dictionary.

The Appendices are:

1. A selection of mediaeval astrological sigils from DIGBY 12C, ASTRONOMIAE 14C, ALCHYMICAL 14C & BONATTI 15C.
2. A late fifteenth century selection of sigils from AGRIPPA 1531.
3. A seventeenth century alchemical list from WORLIDGE 1651
4. A selection of early eighteenth century sigils from SOMMERHOFF 1701.
5. An eighteenth century neo-alchemical list from BERGMANN 1785.
6. Sigils considered 'standard' in modern astrology from WILSON 1819.
7. 'Standard' sigils in modern astrology from DEUTSCHE 1980.

Index of Sigils

MY AIM IN CONSTRUCTING THIS INDEX has been to reduce a vast number of the more frequent sigils to a formal classification which will facilitate identification, and thus supplement in a useful way the entries within this Dictionary. Towards this end, I have reduced some 5,000 sigils to small distinctive groups on the basis of a two fold division. The first division is based on a count of strokes comprising the sigils - a division loosely allied to the character count favoured by the Chinese lexicography - whilst the second division is based upon salient 'recognition features' within the sigils themselves. By this two fold division a very large number of sigils has been reduced, by a fair graphic logic, to groups which may be presented in the space of approximately two pages - indeed, in most cases, within the space of one page only.

My first division is in terms of character strokes. The sigils have been divided according to the number of strokes (straight lines, curves, circles, and so on) which give them their distinctive forms. For example, the following three sigils are each different forms for MERCURY:

A simple count of the number of strokes underlying these three forms reveals each sigil to belong to a different primary class, thus:

 equals  which gives THREE STROKES equals  which gives FOUR STROKES

 equals  which gives FIVE STROKES

A curved loop is counted as THREE STROKES, on the grounds that it consists of an enclosure with two arms, thus:

Because of this, a sigillic form for MERCURY such as  would be counted as consisting of FIVE STROKES, on the following basis:

 equals  which gives FIVE STROKES.

In practice, one must be careful to distinguish such a 'three stroke' loop from the form  which is in fact actually made up from two strokes, one being a straight line, the other a curve. Similarly, the 'three stroke' must be distinguished from the form  which is made up from the small circle and the curve, thus:

What may at first appear to be a somewhat complex matter, proves in fact to be very simple. Anyone who wishes to identify an unknown sigil, in order to find the relevant entry in the Dictionary, must first count the number of strokes from which the sigil is constructed. Suppose, for example, one wishes to seek the identity and meaning of the three sigils:

The first  consists of the constituents:

The second  consists of the constituents:

The third  consists of the constituents:

Accordingly, one would therefore seek the forms (and hence the identity) of each of these three sigils in the columns ranged under the prime class of FOUR STROKES.

By means of this prime division, only five groups are established. It proved impracticable to extend the index beyond the limits of sigillic forms constructed from more than five strokes. However, the very large number of sigils included within such limitations require a further basis of division to make them manageable. I have accordingly adopted a subdivision based on salient recognition principles, which reduce these groups considerably.

The basis of this subdivision is a recognition of the individual images themselves. For example, if we examine once more the three forms given above -  - we must observe that what they have in common is a structure based on three straight lines producing an enclosure of some form or other. If, therefore, we seek to identify these three sigils, we need only look under the prime classification of FOUR STROKES, and under the subdivision Three straight lines producing an enclosure, on page 379 and we should be able to identify these three forms. By means of this identification it should be possible for us to discover the corresponding name which will refer us to the actual entry within the body of the Dictionary.

 relates to OIL OF TARTAR relates to LIME OF EGGSHELL relates to SATURN

Within the respective entries of the Dictionary, further information relating to meaning, source, and so on, will be found.

This second basis of division, by salient recognition principles, has led to the following groupings, alongside which I give here two examples to help in identification of the class.

ONE STROKE

One line or point (page 331) · —

TWO STROKES

Two straight lines (page 322)

One straight line and one curved (page 333)

Both strokes curved (page 335)

Large circle and one stroke (page 338)

Small circle and one stroke (page 340)

Large circle with strokes both inside and outside (page 344)

Two small circles plus stroke (page 346)

Three small circles (page 347)

- One small circle plus one straight line (page 349)
- One small circle plus two straight lines (page 350)
- Three straight strokes forming enclosure (page 351)
- Three straight lines forming open sigil (page 352)
- Two straight lines, in cross or T, forming open sigil (p.354)
